To: FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine
Attention: Dr. Steven Solomon, Director

The following pet owners - on behalf of our pets and all pets - are asking FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine to fully investigate the recent dramatic increase of aflatoxin contaminated pet food.

In addition to your investigation, pet owners are asking FDA to promptly:

- Issue a consumer alert detailing the symptoms of aflatoxin poisoning;
- Issue a press release requesting veterinarians and pet owners to report any pet illness or death from the last 12 months to the FDA for pets fed any type of corn ingredient pet product – this includes corn, corn starch, corn gluten meal, yellow corn, etc;
- Identify the corn suppliers and trace all the suppliers' customers, including pet food brands who purchased corn from them in the last 24 months;
- Implement a random mycotoxin testing program for all pet foods and treats that contain a corn ingredient. This program should at least be ongoing for the next 12 months; and
- Issue monthly updates to pet owners providing the number of aflatoxin/mycotoxin adverse events received (illnesses and death cases) and publicly provide testing results.

Aflatoxin is one of the most dangerous threats to our pets, simply because corn is such a common ingredient – and the mold is basically indestructible. We are saying “Please” - immediate, consistent, and transparent action needs to be taken by the FDA. Pets are dying, and voluntary recalls are not enough.

Sincerely,
