

Limitations: The adverse event and product problem reports contained in this record are not necessarily causally related to (caused by) the reported product, nor do they mean the product was defective. Consumer complaints involving animal foods are received by FDA through voluntary reporting systems. Not all reports undergo follow up actions by FDA; however, each report received is important to FDA as part of our ongoing surveillance efforts related to pet food safety. Trends in reporting can provide an early warning of emerging safety issues of concern.

Other limitations:

- For any given report, there is no certainty that the reported pet food caused the adverse event. The adverse event(s) reported may be more related to an underlying disease, condition, or concomitantly administered medication.
- The report narratives are provided in the form in which we received them, the quality of the information provided about the adverse event/product problem is dependent on the quality of the information received from the veterinarian and/or pet owner.
- Adverse event report numbers should not be used to calculate incidence rates or measures of relative risk. It is not data from a controlled study, and there is no accurate way to know the true size of the population exposed to a product, nor the true population affected with an adverse event.
- Adverse event data should not be used to compare the safety of different products. Many factors can influence reporting, and products that are more widely distributed or sold in greater volume may have more reporting than those with limited distribution or sales. Products for which there has been recent publicity may experience more reporting for a period of time afterwards. Underreporting is also common with adverse event reporting systems.

EON-260293	4/30/2016 22:48	Nature's Domain Salmon Meal & Sweet Potato	I decided to switch my cat to the Kirkland Nature's domain cat food recently. I opened the bag 2 days ago and mixed it with my cat's old food to avoid stomach upset. He ate half of the bowl the first day and threw up that night. He then did not eat any more food for the next 2 days. today he has vomited 3 times including blood tinged vomit and would not touch his food. I emptied the bowl and filled it only with his old food which he gladly ate. he has not vomited since.	1	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair
EON-260249	4/29/2016 22:24	Whiskas Temptations	15 minutes after eating the treats my cat was vomiting profusely. He never gets sick so it was a concern. After this happened 5 times after feeding these treats, i knew there was a problem. I found a thread online where other people posted about the same issue with the same product.	6	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	13	Pound

EON-260246	4/29/2016 21:28	Purina Cat Chow Complete	Cat was throwing up with diarrhea. The cat stopped eating and drinking water. We got meds and fluids--cat diagnosed with liver failure. Cat began to resume eating and drinking. Cat got worse again and provided more meds for 2 months. Gave cat wet food and he started getting better for 2 weeks then taken back to vet due to potassium deficiency/ lethargy--from when he wouldn't eat or drink. Again, the cat got better and resumed eating and drinking. Gave him both wet and dry food. Cat started throwing up and diarrhea like the first time he got sick. Cat never threw up or had diarrhea while strictly on the wet food. All of the dry food came from the same bag, purchased at Sam's Club.			Cat	Unknown
EON-260223	4/29/2016 18:40	Canine Carry Outs	It started on Tuesday, three days, when my dog would suddenly cry out in pain at the slightest touch. Then on Wednesday at home we began finding dark brown-redish vomit around the house. We didn't know which of our two dogs was doing it. It turned out to be our eldest dog (b) (6) who had been vomiting. He's been vomiting at least 4+ times a day, drinking plenty of water, the crying has stopped but I read an article earlier today about Canine Carry Outs and how it has been poisoning pets. I feed my dogs those treats all the time, and he's so far the only one showing symptoms of poisoning, I don't want to lose my dog. He's very important me, so if there's something wrong with this product, please make a recall to prevent other animals from experiencing this.	12	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	10	Pound

EON-260189	4/29/2016 14:56	Boots & Barkley Bone	I purchased a Boots and Barkley bone from target that had a meaty portion on it. Inside the meaty portion there was a sharp, very dangerous bite sized piece of bone that was not attached to the main bone. It got stuck in my dogs throat and he had to have $5500 dollar surgery. He almost died. We looked at another bone of the same variety and it also had a loose, bite sized piece of sharp bone inside the meaty portion. It looked like an arrowhead, very dangerous.	6	Months	Dog	Bulldog - French	16	Pound

EON-260059	4/28/2016 20:12	Fancy Feast Classic Savory Salmon Feast	Cat was being fed Purina Naturals Indoor dry cat food and began to lose weight. I switched to regular Purina Naturals dry cat food, then to Purina regular cat food and she showed no improvement. I added Purina Fancy Feast wet food. Vet said she was just slim, but, healthy. No testing done. Changed dry cat food to Kitten Chow and continued with Fancy Feast wet food. Cat's personality began to change and she began to drink up to 1 to 2 pints of water a day. She would no longer play, became lethargic and needy. Never a lap cat changed to couldn't sit down without a cat in my lap. Returned to Vet, she was diagnosed with kidney failure and given a short time to live if she didn't respond to a special kidney support diet and IV fluids. I now have to administer an IV under her skin three to 4 times a week which treats her like dialysis would in humans. The actual cause of her condition is unknown, but, my vet has seen a marked increase in kidney failure in young cats.	4	Years	Cat	Mixed (Cat)	8	Pound

EON-259793	4/27/2016 15:20	Kibbles 'n Bits Chef's Choice American Grill	(b) (6) has been having allergic skin reactions to the food. He wouldn't eat and kept scratching and having red spots. We assumed it was fleas, or irritation to grass. We found that wasn't the case and took a look at his Kibbles and bits adult dog food, it had plastic thick black hairs all in it! I thought they were boar bristle hairs, but when we burnt them they shriveled and melted like plastic. He refuses to eat it. We told the company and they gave us a coupon for less than what we paid for and for their brand. We used it since we are short on cash and needed dog food and this new bag had the same plastic hairs! A friend got us a big bag of Ol'Roy dog food and I thought this would be good. We opened it and took a close look and it too had the plastic hairs! (b) (6) refuses to eat it as well and he isn't usually this picky. I don't blame him. I have no clue what's going on, none of the ingredients hint about it, I'm positive it's not good for them! Plastic black hairs... Something needs to be done. I have pictures of both (b) (6) skin and the hairy dog food. Thank you, please help. (b) (6)	4	Years	Dog	Terrier (unspecified)	17	Pound

EON-259691	4/26/2016 22:40	Nutro Crunchy Treats with Real Apple, IAMS ProActive Health Senior Plus Large Breed	(b) (6) was active prior to bedtime. Was given 3 Nutro Crunchy Treats. 20 minutes later she was looking to go outside where she vomited twice. She became lethargic and was unable to get back into bed. In the morning we found she had vomited mucus in two different places and had violent bloody diarrhea spread over 3 feet and another trail of lesser quantity. Called (b) (6) at (b) (6). (b) (6) had another bout of diarrhea outside the hospital and was barely able to walk into the office. The following is the account of activities and observations at the animal hospital. She was given an anti-diarrheal, pain and anti-vomiting medication. Also an IV was administered. Blood test was done and was normal. X-rays showed an empty colon but not otherwise remarkable. This according to discussions with office.	13	Years	Dog	Retriever - Labrador	85	Pound
EON-259551	4/26/2016 0:44	STANK BE GONE	I gave all my pets the product Stank Be Gone according to the directions.it seemed to help my Chihuahua mix dog in the bowl all my pets drink from 3 bowls throughout the house. I changes the water every other day as directed. One of my cats was the first one to come down sick. He started urinating throughout the house on furniture and plants not something he has ever done before. He also had blood in his urine. When I brought him to the vet he had a horrible urinary tract infection and had to have special diet and antibiotics. he got better in 6 weeks but needs to be on a special diet for the rest of his life according to my vert. about a week after my cat (b) (6) came down with a urinary tract infection, my dog (I have 3 cats and 2 dogs.) (b) (6) started with a fever and shaking (the shaking went on for at least 3 weeks straight) would not eat or drink. She was very lethargic. after a week of antibiotics she was still not better. As soon as (b) (6) started getting sick I stopped the Stank be Gone, thought it was kind of weird. (b) (6) has been sick before not with a urinary issue though. (b) (6) is from a shelter I have had her for 4 years NEVER been sick a day since I had her. So back to (b) (6), she didn't respond to the antibiotics so I had to get blood work and stronger antibiotics,shots ect. . Bland diet due to vomiting. After a week of stronger antibiotics she still was sick, vet recommended to have her urine tested and she also had a horrendous urinary infection both (b) (6) and (b) (6) had HUGE crystals in there urine. She then was put on Science diet also for 6 weeks. but 2 weeks into it (b) (6) started vomiting again and had bloody stools. Back to the vet again. And they put her on stomach meds and a bland diet of rice and boiled beef or chicken for a week/or two. then back to the science diet again. she is now almost back to herself. I really thought my poor healthy dog could have died. REALLY think it was this water attive that caused it. I am a homemaker and home with my pets everyday. they are well cared for a vetted on a regular basis. I am reporting this to you so that if others have had the same problems it can be recalled. My other iChihuahuaand 2 other cats did not get sick as of this date, thankfully!	6	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	10	Pound

Became quickly weak, unsteady, panting. Would not eat or drink on Sunday and became unable to stand unassisted. By Monday morning, when we took him to Vet, he was practically unresponsive. Bloodwork showed only one abnormality, a highly elevated ALP (Alkaline Phosphatase). No definitive diagnosis. Treated him with IV fluids, steroids and multiple wide-range antibiotics. EON-259313	4/22/2016 18:56	Pur Luv Grande Bone Bacon Flavor	Gave my dog a bacon flavored Grande Bone by PuR LUV, a company owned by Sergeant's Pet Care Products. He was given the treat on Tuesday April 19, 2016. 3 days later on Friday April 22, 2016, he began to dry heave and threw up bile and pieces of the "savory bacon flavor center", then threw up more bile and more pieces an hour later. The pieces had hardened and were not digestible. After further review, there have been multiple complaints about the product, some owners reporting emergency veterinary visits, surgeries, and even death. It appears the hardened pieces can lodge in the intestinal tract of the dog and cause serious issues. This product is sold in stores and online, and is a danger to dogs.	5	Years	Dog	American Pit Bull Terrier	65	Pound
EON-259234	4/22/2016 12:20	Nylabone Healthy Edibles Wild with Real Bison	I purchased a product (Nylabone Small Dog Treats - Bison) which claimed to be an excellent alternative chew bone to rawhide. The labeling also said that using 'Bison' as a protein source was cleaner and better for my dog's health. Within a day of trying this dog chew, my pet was having intestinal distress which I did not at the time attribute to the new product. This subsided after another day so he was given a second treat. This time he has been suffering from vomiting, diarrhea and lethargy. A visit to his vet named it as pancreatitis and said that it was the second dog within one week that she has seen after having this same brand dog treat. My bill was close to $350 and my dog has suffered unnecessarily for over a week.	4	Years	Dog	Shih Tzu	15.5	Pound

EON-259045	4/20/2016 16:12	Colorado Naturals Chicken & Sweet Potato Jerky	Three golden retrievers were given one jerky treat each on sunday April 17th. These were new, as I had never tried these before, though I had used the brand before. The 1 year old golden vomited that evening and was somewhat lethargic that night, recovering the next day. On monday the 18th, the 11 year old golden began to show symptoms ie. vomiting, not eating and lethargy and these symptoms continued. Tuesday morning, my 6 year old golden refused to eat, had vomited multiple time and was very lethargic. He couldn't even keep water down. The 11 and 1 year old are owned by another individual who brought the 11 year old into the vet on tuesday. I brought my golden in on tuesday right away for fear of dehydration since he could keep any water down. (b) (6), her mother, age 10 yrs., is also healthy with no pre existing health conditions. On the night of April 17, (b) (6) & (b) (6) consumed 1 can of Purina Fancy Feast Savory Salmon Feast Classic each. The next morning, April 18, both began vomiting yellow bile & developed severe runny diarrhea with blood tinged mucous. That evening, April 18, (b) (6) vomited again & had severe diarrhea with voluminous amounts of blood tinged mucous after which she immediately retreated underneath our bed to rest, where she remained for the remainder of the night, forgoing her usual sleeping location in her bed next to ours that night with our male (b) (6). (b) (6) remained lethargic in her crate which she has free access to. As of this writing, April 19, at 2p, (b) (6) remains lethargic & (b) (6) has come out from her resting place under the bed only once since last night briefly to drink a massive amount of water after which she immediately retreated to her resting place under the bed where she remains at this time, 1:30p on April 19.	3	Years	Dog	Terrier - Australian	15	Pound

EON-258769	4/20/2016 0:29	Wellness Complete Health Turkey Formula	VOMITED THREE FEEDINGS IN A ROW BEFORE WE REALIZED THE FOOD WAS COMPROMISED. DISCOVERED MANY BULGING CANS, SOME OF WHICH WERE BARELY DISCERNIBLE AT FIRST GLANCE, BUT LATER DISCOVERED SOME WERE "GROWING." I purchased 4 cases (24 cans each) over 2 weeks time from the same location. On the second visit, the store manager noticed a couple of bulging, about to explode cans, but thought it was a fluke. I took home on this second visit 2 cases and stored them in our pantry still in the store bags. The first two cases were already on our pantry shelf being used. On 4/16/16 I went to put away the two cases still in bags and noticed several were bulging. I then looked through the remaining 22 cans from the first two cases purchased the prior week and discovered others that were bulging. I suspect that the three feedings earlier in the week from which (b) (6) vomited were slightly bulging but not as readily noticeable (in hindsight). Some just had "soft crackling" lids when pressed, while others had become noticeably bulging. I took everything back to PetValu and the store manager pulled the entire lot (they were all the same) from the shelves and notified his contact person. I notified Wellness via their Web site contact form as well as via Facebook. I received a lame, insufficient response, copied in part here and the reason why I am filing this w/ FDA: "We appreciate the information you provided and have documented it and notified our Quality Team and Manufacturers. We do not have any reports regarding this recipe or batch and do believe this is an isolated incident." Personally, I cannot understand how they classify this as "isolated" when it was clear that much of the lot was affected. My cat is incredibly lucky he didn't get sicker and that I determined the problem rather quickly and stopped the feeding of the compromised food.	13	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	12.5	Pound

EON-258489	4/18/2016 12:48	Golden Rewards Duck Jerky Recipe	I had 2 Chihuahua's to die this past week due to Walmart Golden Rewards duck jerky so I am seeking the phone # or web line to reporting this to the FDA. One 14yrs old and the other 8yrs old. Had taken them to the vet - both with weakness, weight loss, difficulty breathing. Vet diagnosed as Pulmonary edema possibly related to heart disease but was suspicious due to both dogs becoming sick at the same time yet one of my dogs was much younger than the other...vet could not come up with any other diagnosis and treated with diuretic and heart medication. I could only get them to eat boiled chicken breast and drink water in which they greatly improved after 3 days. At this time their appetites was great so I gave them their usual treats. The next day both became very ill at this time I began to think & realized it was something they were eating, and concluded it was the duck jerky. I attempted to give boiled chicken but neither would take and both died within 12-24hrs of restarting this treat. much to my sadness I would love to get this information out to others in hopes to prevent another person from losing their beloved pet.	8	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	10	Pound

EON-258327	4/16/2016 21:56	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition Roasted Chicken Rice & Vegetable Flavor	I bought a bag of Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition dog food and started using it April 8th, 2016. The morning after feeding my adult dog this product, she vomited. I thought she needed to get used to the new dog food, so I kept feeding her the product. (I did not see anything on the dog food I was feeding her.) The next day, she did not vomit during the day, but vomited sometime during the night. I still thought she needed to get used to the new food, and kept feeding her the following days. Finally, she got sick again in the middle of the night, so I figured the food just wasn't sitting well with her. I gave her a different brand and regret ever switching to Pedigree! Today I noticed that the dog food near the bottom of the bag appeared to be moldy! I obviously stopped feeding my other dog this food and am hoping they will not have any long term effects from eating this product multiple times. In addition, a nine year old child who feeds the dogs probably ingested particles from this potentially moldy dog food. I probably ingested these mold particles when feeding my dogs as well, and had a sinus infection during this time period. I do not know if the food is related to the sinus infection, but have no doubt that this dog food is directly related to my dogs vomiting multiple times.	4	Years	Dog	Terrier - Yorkshire	17	Pound

On Thursday, April 14, I ended up taking him to a reputable Animal Emergency Pet care clinic, where he was put on I.V. and kept overnight. The vet told me that if I had not brought him in when I did, (b) (6) would have died. When I brought him home, I tried to coax him to eat. However, he became lethargic and extremely weak again. I had switched to Pedigree Adult dog food the week before because the store was out of his regular brand. At the suggestion of my niece, I discontinued using the Pedigree and gave him his regular food again. I was and still are in SHOCK!, I called the PET E.R. In (b) (6), they asked Me a Few Questions then told me to bring her BODY in, they asked if she could have gotten into any poison I told them NO WAY she is an Indoor Cat, and I am a Responsible Pet Owner and I have Children so there is No Poison at all in My HOME, and I know things like Chocolate etc are Dangerous to Pets so I make Sure My Pets are never exposed to anything that could harm them My Pets are My children as well! I told the Staff Member at the Pet E.R. that the only thing that was New was The Cat Food I had Purchased on Tuesday (b) (6). they did Not have her normal Flavor in the small Bags which was" Nestle Purina Friskies Grillers", so I figured same brand just get a Different Flavor" Nestle Purina Indoor Chicken". EON-257882	4/14/2016 14:40	Blue Buffalo Blue Freedom Adult Chicken Recipe	Recently started a new bag of Blue Buffalo Freedom Adult Dog Food, Chicken. Expiration date: March 29, 2017, Lot #: L24301:15. Within a few days (3/19-20/16) of starting the new bag one of my dogs came down with hemorrhagic gastroenteritis and pancreatitis and immediately went to the ER. Two days later (3/21/16), my second dog started to show similar symptoms. Both dogs began treatment. Within 24hrs of reporting the problems to my veterinarian about my second dog, I was told by the vet that another dog had come in that morning with similar problems, also on Blue Buffalo Dog food. Food was immediately discontinued. My third dog has vomited a few times since that time. The second dog is currently in the vet office having more extensive tests done. Her blood is not clotting, liver enzymes and blood sugar levels came back elevated. More results to come. Follow up lab testing on the first dog has not been concluded at this time. On March 21st Blue Buffalo sent me a claim they wanted me to fill out. Since this whole thing began I have called them several times to find out more information. See what testing was being done on the product, inquire about Standard Operating Procedures, testing methods, frequency of 3rd party testing, certificates of analysis, microbe and lab results. All information was denied. I have been told to fill out the claim if I have any interest in having my vet bills paid for (this is not about money to me but animals being at risk and possibly dying), and they may or may not release their findings at the time the claim is concluded (8-12 weeks after being submitted). I have been told by Blue Buffalo to contact my legal and no information will be released regarding this issue. Please help before more animals are possibly effected and die.	1	Years	Dog	American Hairless Terrier	10	Pound

On 4/4/16 he was seen again at his primary veterinarian for recurrent symptoms, and bloodwork again revealed proteinuria and azotemia (BUN 153, creatinine 4.3). He was seen on 4/6 at our referral hospital, with bloodwork showing a BUN of 155, creatinine 4.3, albumin 2.0. Isosthenuria at 1.017 with 3+ protein and a UPC of 4.4; urine culture is negative so far. A new onset of normoglycemic glucosuria was observed, as well. He was also hypertensive at 174 mmHg systolic. He was started on telmisartan (angiotensin-receptor blocker), amlodipine (anti-hypertensive) and a prescription renal diet (Royal Canin Renal canned & dry). When the glucosuria was identified we asked his owners about exposure to toxins given evidence for both glomerular and tubular disease; his owners confirmed he had been eating TopChews Chicken Jerky Fillets both in February and now (but had been off them when he was previously hospitalized and recovering, starting again a few weeks before he got sick again). EON-257506	4/12/2016 21:36	PRO PAC Ultimates Overland Red	About 4 weeks ago I found a substance in my dog's food that looked suspicious so I called the local store where I purchased the food and they told me to bring it back for them to look at it. I did so and they were concerned and told me to contact the number on the back of the food and talk with someone. I contacted Rick with Midwestern Pet Foods and spoke with him concerning this and he wanted to send a bag of food for my inconvenience and in return to send a sample of the food. I did so and a week later I had to call him and his response was "it's corn". The dog food is GRAIN FREE, I said. Then his response was "it's bone". The ingredient panel says beef meal, not beef meal and bone! Rick then tells me bone shouldn't be in there either. He gave me another guys name, Lonnie. So I call Lonnie. He explains to me if this substance was bone that it should have been so ground up that I wouldn't have even seen it in the first place. Even though bone is not on the ingredient label. Lonnie wants the sample so Rick sends it to him. Lonnie calls me and said now he thinks it's the hull of a chickpea. in the mean time I have my dog's vet to look at the food and he said he thinks it's plastic. I also has a chemist look at the food and he told me it looks like a synthetic fiber and couldn't be for sure unless we send it off to be tested. Midwestern Foods is not concerned about what the substance is. I am concerned cause my little dog has thrown up many times while on this food. I started her on this when she turned a 1 year old in November of 2015. And I only seen the substance about 4 weeks and no telling how long I would have continued to give this to her. I only seen it cause I had my glasses on, I need bifocals when I wear my contacts. Even though I have stopped feeding her this brand she still throws up and I feel the damage is already done.	18	Months	Dog	Shih Tzu	10	Pound
EON-257480	4/12/2016 18:24	Evanger's Hunk of Beef Au Jus	I fed my dog a can of Evangers Hunk of Beef canned dog food. While removing the food from the can, I noticed a black line along the outside of the food (the part touching the can) This particular food has a lot of dark spots, so while I thought it was peculiar, I did not inspect it further. My dog was eating, and I heard her stop briefly which is unusual. When I went to retrieve her dish, there was a corroded, food encrusted, bent metal nail on the floor by her food dish. I then realized this was the "black line" that I saw in the food. Had she ingested this object it would have killed her. I notified Chewy.com (online retailer) who requested photos of the object and offered a refund. I contacted the manufacturer, Evangers via their website alerting them of the issue. I received an automated response from "sales@evangersdogfood.com" that they would contact me within two business days. Today is the end of the second business day and I have not been contacted via email or phone. As you can imagine I am extremely upset and this is simply unacceptable. What is even more concerning is that the can states the product is "hand packed" causing me to question whether this may have been intentional. Out of concern for other dogs and their owners, and due to lack of response by the company I feel it is my responsibility to report this incident to the FDA. I will not be purchasing this product ever again.

When fed over 3/4 of a cup, all four of our dogs would throw up. The recommended serving size for their weights (22.5, 20.5, 18.5, 12.3 lbs, respectively) is around 1/2 to 1 1/2 cups. At first I thought it was the glucosamine/chondroitin in their food causing the problem, because all my dogs take Dasuquin w/MSM. I thought that maybe they were getting too much in their diet. But that isn't the case. Others have wondered if it is a problem with their food source. I began trying to call the FDA in November 2015, tried to file a complaint the same month, and finally filed the complaint with the White House in March of 2016. It is also important to note that when I complained to Acana on their Facebook page, they blocked me from being able to post anything in the future. They have also blocked other people who have had problems with their products. I took photographs of the foreign object and emailed them to the company and questioned what the object was and why it was in one of the cow ear treats. The president/CEO of the company, Kyle Goguen, replied and identified the foreign object as an identification tag. He further explained that all cows receive identification tags that are attached to the cow's ear and prior to "processing" the tags are removed. He attributed our incident to human error and stated that if we did not see any other tags on the remaining cow ears from our order, they were safe to give to our dog. I responded to him by pointing out the plastic tag our dog choked on was not visible prior to us giving the cow ear to him. Obviously, if we had seen the tag, we would not have given the treat to our dog. I also suggested to him that since many of the cow ears in our order had large folds of skin on them, it was likely the tag was hidden in one of those folds therefore making it impossible to detect. He offered a full refund of the purchase price which we declined, but he did not address the obvious ongoing safety issue and still offers the cow ear treats for sale via the company website. We have copies of our email correspondence along with photographs of the plastic ear tag and paperwork from our purchase.

We took her to vet for testing and her lab results were normal. Vet treated her w/ antibiotic and anti-diarrheal medication, and fed her a gastro-intestinal formula (from another brand)for several days. Her symptoms cleared up and we slowly reintroduced her regular Nutro/Senior dog food. Within a week her symptoms returned. We gave her anti-diarrheal medication provided by vet and this seemed to help a little, but GI issues still exhibited intermittently. My dog consumed one pretzel with no identified problems. During my dogs consumption of the second pretzel I promptly noticed a very distinct fecal aroma coming from the bully stick. I promptly placed the remains of the item in a plastic bag and returned it to (b) (6) at the location above. It is clear that the item was either exposed to or contained some type of fecal matter that gave off a very distinct and disgusting fecal matter aroma. I am concerned about any health risks my dog may now has been exposed to and would be concerned over similar contaminations from the manufacturer. My dog is a female Jack Russell approximately 12 years old, as it is hard to determine by her "rescue" origin. She has been receiving regular vet check-ups and is current with all her vaccinations and shots. She is not experiencing any known identified illnesses or symptoms. I have notified both (b) (6) and Barworthies of this problem in writing and filled out a written complaint with the (b) (6) store. EON-256532	4/5/2016 9:56	Fromm Large Breed Adult Gold	We have been feeding our dog this exact food for the past year (he is only a year old). Recently, he has been refusing to eat and is now puking up stomach bile. We took him to the vet did some tests and the vet told us he was just a 'picky' eater. Normally I would agree, however, he goes days where he wants to eat all of his food out of starvation, to days where he isn't interested at all and just pukes. The reason why I am thinking this is an issue with the food is, a girlfriend in my workplace started to tell me about her dog that is having the exact same symptoms as our dog. When I asked her which food her dog was eating, she mentioned her dog is also eating Fromm Gold. That worries me and is going to make me completely change his food. It's a shame since this has been known to be a good food. I also did some research and saw they had a recall for the Fromm Gold canned food in March 2016. I am wondering if the issue is with the whole Gold line and not just canned food. I am hoping someone can get to the bottom of it. We have nothing against Fromm - picked it for a reason; family owned, great ingredients and American made. I just don't want this to happen to more dogs out there. We've already spent enough at the vet trying to figure out an issue that could easily just be the food.

A few hours later, ^{(b) (6)} experienced dry heaves, refused to eat, and was lethargic. The symptoms last for a day. We weren't sure at that time, what had caused his behavior. Then on Tuesday March 29th, we gave him another chicken jerky treat. This time the reaction was much more alarming and we are sure the treat caused it. His symptoms began within a few hours of eating the treat...he experienced vomiting, lack of appetite, and lethargy. He refused to eat or drink. We were very concerned that he may die. It is now late evening on March 31st and he is beginning to act himself again. I have contacted PetSmart corporate offices by email. EON-256095	3/31/2016 0:12	Nutro Max Cat Kitten Chicken & Oceanfish Formula	I have triplet kittens who are 6 months old. I've had them since they were 5 weeks old, which is when they began eating canned kitten food (per vet's direction). They get 5 flavors, 2 of which are Nutro MaxCat (in addition to dry food). They NEVER refused food, until 3/11/16, when ALL THREE simultaneously refused Chicken and Oceanfish. ALL 3 kittens wouldn't touch it! Two days later I tried again and, again, ALL THREE wouldn't touch it. They have not had that reaction with any other canned food and have averaged 4 cans a day (a little over a can per kitten). They are very healthy and have had regular vet checkups. I am very particular about not using expired food, I regularly rotate my stock, and I'm extra cautious about not buying dented cans and even ask the clerk not to drop them in the bag. Then we went for a walk. About 20 minutes into the walk my pet suddenly collapsed, starting having a seizure, his tongue lolled in and out, his back was arched like a saw horse, his jaw was locked and his eyes bulging. He cried out in pain then was silent just convulsing. After about 5 to 10 minutes he slowly recovered we walked back home he kept collapsing and was unable to walk far. He refused to eat any of his food or any other snacks or the same snack. He ate boiled egg yolk for a few days then stopped eating even that. I took him to the vet on 02/08/2016 and described the symptoms and took the packet of dog treat and showed it to the vet. The vet did an exam, tests 1H Chem 17 Catalyst, 1H Electrolyte Catalys, 1H CBC, then gave the dog Polyflex injection 250 mg, Amoxicaps 250 MG, Mirtazapine Tablets 15 MG, bought new dog food called Science Diet and treats from the vet. The dog started eating after that but after two days again stopped eating, lost weight from 51 lbs to 47 lbs. Went to the vet again on 02/20/2016 and they repeated the antibiotics this time by injection not capsules. He was re-examined, given Convenia Injection 80 MG, Dexamethasone Injection 2 MG, Mirtazapine tablets bought new dog treats from the vet but the dog did not eat any dog food or dog treats that I tried to give him, I tried different varieties he would not eat anything, drank water sometimes. His legs failed to support him, appeared to be made of rubber and just bent in any direction, he could not walk, climb stairs. Then I bought store cooked real meat from the same (b) (6) store in (b) (6) and gave it to the dog - smoked pork loin, smoked ham, smoked baby back ribs. The dog ate small portions of that and got some of his strength back. He was able to walk a bit but always sank down in exhaustion but did not have convulsions. On (b) (6) evening the dog went out into my front yard and started eating something that was on the ground. After 15 minutes he had the same exact symptoms as he had on (b) (6), after eating the chicken jerky from that package. He had	17	Years	Dog	Retriever - Golden	47	Pound spasms, convulsions and collapsed. I did not know what he was going through, thought he will get up and walk back and be ok like the other day. He got worse, I got him to my house and he was panting and having spasms, convulsions and died the next day (b) (6) at around 7 am. His back was arched, his mouth was in a eery grin, he had lock jaw and eyes staring and he stopped breathing. These symptoms match Strychnine poisoning. I have the package of treat with me and believe it caused my dog to die and also possible someone again dropped the same stuff in the yard where he could find and eat it since he was slowly recovering by eating store bought meat. I feel this is a crime meant to kill my dog. Please take action on this manufacturer and ban these treats from the U.S.

Well, that floored me, as my dog had a minor seizure one night and I thought it might have been a fluke. Now maybe I can understand better why he had one. Plus, he has bouts, every couple of weeks, where he doesn't want to eat and he just goes outside and eats grass and throws up. You can't imagine how I feel, now that I know that the product is effective. EON-252681	3/10/2016 18:44	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Large Breed Senior Chicken and Brown Rice Recipe	I am a boxer breeder who has been feeding my boxers Blue Buffalo Chicken and Rice Large Breed Adult and Senior formulas for approximately three years. I will sometimes alternate feeding the two formulas, or I have on an occasion, mixed the two formulas together (the boxers prefer the Adult to the Senior). My dry kibble dog food is always stored in 20 gal totes, which are cleaned as the container is emptied. On Mar 3, 2016, I received a shipment of the two formals from a NC distributor. I mixed a bag of the newly arrived Senior formula in with a like amount of existing Adult formula and stirred/mixed the two products together. I closed the tote and left. Several hours later, I returned to feed the boxers: at that time, when I opened the mixed product tote, I immediately noted a distinctive different odor coming from the dog food. I topped off several of the dog food bowls with an approximately 1/2 to 1 cup each of the mixed products. The boxers ate the food, but they didn't appear to be really interested in eating it. I then opened another bag of the newly arrived Senior formula, the dry kibble emitted the same strong, distinctive odor as that in the mixed kibble. I contacted the distributor, who advised that this was their first complaint regarding the odor. I contacted CS at Blue Buffalo, and the rep stated she would pass the compliant along with batch number that I provided to their QC folks, but this was the first occurrence of this problem that she was aware of. I later contacted the BB factory rep and she also took the manufacture lot information and stated that she would follow up on the problem. Shortly thereafter, I received a call from the CS rep, who I had previously spoken with, and she assured me that the QC folks had checked out the particulars of the lot run that my bags of Senior kibble came from and that everything was OK. I then ask her if she could reconcile how my two bags of Senior that had a distinctive odor and the lot run did not; she really never specifically answered my question. I offered to forward samples of the dog food from each newly arrived bag to Blue Buffalo, but she declined my offer. I have not detected any adverse effects from feeding my boxers the small amount that I did on Mar 6, but I have been concerned enough with this matter that they have been fed only the Adult formula since that time, and the food in the newly arrived Adult product bags did not have any pronounced odor. This is somewhat of an unique problem and I find it somewhat difficult to understand how I have two bags, possibly five, of dry Senior kibble that have a pronounced/suspect odor, but there is no acknowledgement that the lot that these bags came from of having a similar problem. I cannot attest to the seriousness of this problem at this point, but I feel something is not right with the bags of dog Senior food that arrived here.

On Friday, March 4th I woke to her vomiting and finding bloody diarrhea all over the floors in our home. At that point we rushed her to the vet where she stayed the entire day for observation. She was given IV fluids, vitamins and injections of Penicillin as well anti-diarrhea tablets. Blood work was drawn. Barium was given and 2 x-rays were performed. The Vet could not say for sure what had happened to our pet. Her blood work did not show signs of virus, etc. and her levels were normal. She was then sent home and placed on a special diet. The following day, Saturday, March 5th she was taken back in for further treatment (IV therapy, more Penicillin). She appeared to be completely back to normal by Monday morning. On Monday evening I gave her the Brothers Complete dog food for dinner for the first time since Thursday, March 3rd. EON-250159	2/27/2016 22:12	Natural Balance L.I.D. Limited Ingredient Diets Potato & Duck Formula Small Breed Bites	Dog was fed this same brand and formula of kibble since Nov 2011, I bought a new bag on 2/19/2016, started using it on 2/20 or 2/21. On (b) (6) after awakening, going outside to urinate and having normal daily medicines administered dog drank usual filtered water but refused to eat her meal. She laid in a dog bed then vomited a large volume consisting of water, yellow slime and two Cheerios, her potty treats. She slept/rested, drank more water, several hours later was fed boiled white rice and fat-drained cooked hamburger. My dogs also consume the same brand & formula of biscuits, she had started refusing them after several years of eating them at bedtime. She did not vomit while on the hamburger/rice diet for over 48 hours, she appeared well and happy Sunday afternoon, and Monday & Tuesday evening in front of witnesses. On (b) (6) @ 9:30 pm I fed her rice & hamburger plus 2 tbsp of kibble. She started panting hard, vomited a little food, had a break then panted hard again and vomited more food. She appeared to be very uncomfortable, she drank a little water but did not vomit. I consulted with a friend whose dogs had experienced pancreatitis, (b) (6) didn't fit the pain/presentation for this. At 2 am on (b) (6) I took her outside, she urinated several times and defecated, her stool was of normal appearance and consistency. She had been observed defecating Tuesday evening, it was of normal appearance and consistency. She had been urinating Wednesday afternoon and evening. I did not suspect dehydration to be a concern. She was restless and finally laid in her dog bed to rest between 3:30-4 a.m. on (b) (6). I relocated the puppy to his crate in my bedroom, I was reluctant to disturb (b) (6), left a light on in the LR, checked on her, told her to come to bed if she wanted, that I would come check on her. While I sat on my bed I heard her nails on the laminate flooring then heard a thud. I found her in the dining area splayed out on an area rug. I thought she couldn't walk, tried to pick her up but her front paws and body were rigid, she had urinated. I brought her dog bed to my bedroom, within a few minutes she walked to and entered the bedroom. She let me put her in bed as usual but she couldn't stay still, she wanted down. After setting her on the floor she hid behind a chair then squeezed between the bed and a nightstand her face	7	Years	Dog	Pug	20	Pound

			toward the wall. She emerged, looked up at the bed so I again lifted her up onto the bed. After wandering around on the bed she laid at the foot, I put cushions on the floor in case she lost her bearings and fell. She burped, seemed a little less uncomfortable, laid on her side and allowed me to pet her tummy/underside, scratch her ears, etc. which she seemed to enjoy. She finally laid across the bed pillows with her head on my head, appeared to be asleep or resting better by the sound of her breathing. I was watching TV, planning to phone the vet's office, get dressed and drive to arrive when the doctors started working at 8 a.m. I suddenly heard her breathing rhythm and sounds change. I wanted to check the position of her neck. While I was gently moving her body to examine her she stopped breathing. I blew in her mouth, shook her head a little, spoke to her but I had felt her tongue touch my arm, it was cold. Her body was warm, I saw some feces on the pillowcase, she died in my arms at 6:51 a.m. Throughout the three days after I started feeding the new bag of kibble to my two beloved emotional support pets my 6-month-old puppy had stopped eating his usual amount of food, he was eating much slower, less frequently, waiting several hours, eating his lunch at supertime and not finishing it. He went to bed on (b) (6) at 3 a.m. with uneaten supper left in his dish and had no bedtime meal. He also refused to eat biscuits which were purchased the same day as the kibble. He had previously finished every meal quickly and had been eating the same kibble since I adopted him in Oct 2015. Pug dogs like to eat, they are prone to being overweight if allowed to eat whenever and as much as they desire. (b) (6) was normally fed 1/3 cup of kibble twice daily. She was given fat-free home-made bone broth before her first meal on most days in an attempt to help her joint health and overall well-being It was withheld after she vomited on (b) (6) which was the first time I had ever witnessed/remember her vomiting in over four years of owning her. She was given a dental treat after supper after having had a dental procedure done in early 2015, in order to maintain good oral hygiene which affects overall health. The dental treats were also withheld after (b) (6). I phoned the veterinary clinic on the afternoon of Wednesday (b) (6) to verify how much and how long to feed the lean hamburger & cooked white rice diet, I had other questions and comments when I spoke to the staff member. This new bag of kibble is at least 95% full, the vet suggested not feeding it to the puppy after I reported (b) (6) sudden, unexpected death. I called the clinic within 20-30 minutes of her passing, after moving her body before the puppy awoke and saw her. It was surreal, I was in shock, this had never happened to me before other than a planned vet-assisted pet euthanasia. If the puppy had not refused the treats and meals and didn't finish meals or eat his normal quantity I would perhaps be less inclined to suspect the new bag of kibble. Also because (b) (6) was well for over 48 hours without consuming the kibble but after introducing a very small amount she was sick, suffering and died less than 10 hours later. I also thought the kibble appeared lighter in color than usual, after purchasing it for my pugs since 2011.

EON-249476	2/25/2016 8:44	Hill's Prescription Diet Z/D , Royal Canin Veterinary Diet Feline Hydrolyzed Protein Adult HP	I have 2 cats one of which has a food allergy. I began feeding both cats Science Diet Z/D as recommended by the Vet. The first bag they ate. When a second bag was purchased, they wouldn't hardly touch it and started loosing weight. I went back to where I purchased the food and talked to a second Vet. about them not eating the product. Royal Canin Prescription which also has hydrolyzed protein was recommended, so I ordered a bag. They only nibbled at it. Then I noticed one of the cats was loosing even more weight and stopped interacting with the other cat and me. So I took her, they are both females, to the Vet. She was extremely sick. They said they found several masses, which were thought to be cancer, and a really bad UT Infection. When I asked if it could have been the food I was told it was just a coincidence. Sine then I know that one of the Vets has checked the recall list about 3 times. But if companies don't put any information on there, the Vets don't know either. About a week after she came home from the Vet, she is recoving nicely thank goodness, I was sitting down with my second cat in my lap. She started jerking and I thought she was having a dream. I have seen a couple of humans have a Grand Mal Seizure and what was happening to her looked like that. She was still on the Royal Canin. Which cat and how often they vomited started slowly and become steady after each time of eating. They also had a little bit of diarrhea. They also completely lost interest in eating this food was which is not normal for them. We do not leave out food, but feed them twice a day to have more social animals. Suspecting their food was the issue, I purchased a different brand and immediately they ate and had no more spells of vomiting or diarrhea. They do not seem to have any long term effect from this issue with the food, but I could see this being a serious issue with a pet that is already sick.	13	Years	Cat	Domestic (unspecified)	8	Pound
EON-248660	2/19/2016 18:32	Pedigree Vitality+ Original flavor Adult Dog	I had been regularly feeding my dogs Pedigree dried dog food for the past 2 years. 2 of 4 of my dogs developed "hives" on the snout shortly after consuming the dog food. One of my dogs was reluctant to eat the food but finally did eat a small amount and vomited undigested dog food. The dogs were treated with Benadryl after speaking with our veterinarian. Initially, I hadn't made any connection between the new batch of food and the symptoms they were experiencing, so subsequently fed the dogs the same food for the next 2 days, and observed the symptoms of "hives" becoming progressively worse, so that the entire body was affected. The dog that had vomited refused to eat any of the food after her episode of vomiting and coincidentally was the only dog that did not breakout in hives. I switched to another brand of food and the problem abruptly stopped. I have saved the partial bag of dog food. I have also reported the incident to the vendor, the company and will be sending a sample to pedigree for analysis as well. It was about the size of a molar, with a sharp edge and a dangerous point. We took a picture of the object. We called the store to inform them of our discovery and suggested that they might want to remove this particular product from their shelves. We also filled out an on-line form from the manufacturer's website, informing them of our discovery and all pertinent information that was on the package. We are keeping the packaging and the foreign object in case it is needed later. The food was not ingested by our dog, so no harm was done. We do not expect or want any compensation. EON-248371	2/18/2016 23:52	IAMS Proactive Health Adult Minichunks	After purchasing Iams Adult Dry Dog food on (b) (6) 1 6 year old female began vomiting, diarrhea, and refused to eat. She went downhill rapidly over 3 days. Then she began to slowly get better and now appears fine. A week or so later a 4 year old female developed the same symptoms, with ONE EXCEPTION, blood in her vomit. I took her to the emergency room vet and she died on the table. This all happened over a 2 to 3 day period. I have fed Iams for decades and never suspected the food even while this was happening, several other dogs appeared fine. The vet said this was symptoms of poisons or of the dog ingesting something. After careful thought, the only common factor was the dog food. Both dogs were separate and away from each other. They never left their enclosed yard and the one that died was almost isolated from anyone being able to get to her.	4	Years	Dog	Rottweiler	90	Pound

EON-248310	2/18/2016 16:36	Freshpet Vital Grain Free Beef & Bison Recipe	I purchased 6 chubs of Freshpet Vital Bison and Beef at Petco on 2/5/16, expiration date 4/7/16. I began feeding from these chubs on 2/14/16 (chubs were immediately refrigerated after purchase). On 2/15/16 My 9 year old Shih Tzu male began to have mucous filled diarrhea, on 2/16/16 my 4 month old doberman and 2 year old Shih Tzu started with mucous filled diarrhea. By 2/16/16 all three dogs were violently ill. I have a fourth dog, who does not eat Freshpet Bison and Beef, she did not become ill. Only the dogs eating Freshpet became ill. My dogs do not get human food, treats, raw hide, or any other food source other than their meals. My dogs have a fenced clean yard and only go out with my direct supervision - hence they do not pick up and eat stuff from the yard. My dogs have no access to trash, and my floors are spotless and clean from any debris or things they could pick up and ingest. My dogs are all vaccinated and have not had any contact with dogs outside our home. Stool samples from all three dogs revealed high concentrations of bacteria that should not have been in their stool. Samples were sent to a third party lab to verify no other pathogen is causing this disease. The lab report has been completed and my dogs are clear of any parasites or giardia. Our vet concluded that the Freshpet may be contaminated with pathogenic bacteria. Our vet said she would be happy to speak with you and give any needed information and can be contacted at: (b) (6) My sister also feeds Freshpet Vital Bison and Beef, she lives in (b) (6). Her dog became violently ill with the same symptoms as my three sick dogs, her dog became ill three weeks ago. We compared sell by dates, and her chub also had a sell by date of 4/7/16. I contacted Petco who was happy to refund the entire purchase of 6 chubs (including the eaten ones) if I returned the remaining 2 and 3/4 chubs to them. I contacted the manufacturer who said they wanted me to return the 2 and 3/4 chubs directly to them and they would reimburse me for 1 chub. Later I spoke to Genevive Ferrara (manager at Freshpet) who said she would reimburse me for 3 chubs. When I complained the Petco would reimburse me for all 6, she stated that "I need to do the right thing, and send it back to them" A red flag went up being that I believe the manufacturer should take the responsibility of doing the right thing at a financial loss, not me, being that I am already out the money for the food and a $220.00 vet bill. I only wanted to be reimbursed for the food I would be returning and the food that possible made my dogs sick. I will keep the 2 and 3/4 chubs in case you would like to test them, I am happy to give them to the FDA, but feel very uncomfortable giving them to the manufacturer at this point.	2	Years	Dog	Shih Tzu	12	Pound

EON-248295	2/18/2016 15:36	Freshpet Vital Grain Free Beef & Bison Adult Dog Food	(b) (6) began having diarrhea, which worsened over the course of two days. Then she began vomiting her entire meal. I have been feeding her Freshpet Vital No Grain Beef and Bison chubs for three years without incident, but I suspected this batch may be causing the problem when I smelled it and it seemed different from previous batches of food. Usually her food smells like fresh bologna, but this smelled like chemicals. I stopped feeding her the food and unfortunately threw it away, but then my sister called to inform me that three out of four of her dogs were very sick. We had compared expiration dates a month before and they were different, but then she bought a new batch that was the same expiration of 4/7/2016. Her dogs had the same symptoms as mine with the exception of one, which eats other food due to a healthy issue, but the other three are just now recovering. I did not consider reporting this because my dog is in heat, and I thought maybe she was sensitive to food for that reason, but as sick as she got and then my sister's dogs - I suspect (b) (6) ate tainted food. Fortunately my sister still has the food in case you want to test it. I have been reading a lot of forums where people have complained about their dogs getting sick from this food, including a mold contamination back in May of which they have done nothing about. I would hate to see any immune compromised dogs get deathly sick from this. On several occasions while traveling in my motor home last year I put about 50 kibbles into a glass container and put it into the microwave of my motor home to warm for 6 seconds because I keep it in the refrigerator. After two seconds, it started to spark and arc just like when metal is put into a micro wave. On other occasions the same food from the same bag and in the same glass container, did not spark the microwave. Today, February 16th, 2016 I decided to document this on this site as this morning, in my home, another microwave, the food sparked and arced in the microwave again. I also phoned Pet Guard and notified them of this issue last year and they did nothing about it and said they were not concerned and that the food is fine and I believed them. Several hours later it turned into severe bloody diarrhea and bloody, foamy vomit so I took her to the emergency vet. She had not eaten anything other than her usual dry food with a small amount of canned food for breakfast. My other dogs did not have an issue. This same dog had an identical problem about 8 - 10 years ago when I fed her jerky treats from China (this was before I started hearing reports in the media about issues with these treats). I had a boxer at the time and he didn't have an issue, but she developed bloody diarrhea and vomiting the day after I fed her a jerky strip. Because of that incident, I had not fed any of my dogs any jerky or even treats from China until this time. I was careful to ensure these were made in the USA, but now I believe some dogs just cannot process jerky treats and they should come with a warning.	14	Years	Dog	American Pit Bull Terrier	65	Pound

We buy the Fancy Feast product in bulk at Costco for our 3 barn cats to eat on the weekends. However we gave our indoor cat (b) (6) a can of it and within 10-15 minutes of eating it she had explosive bloody diarrhea. I heard her bound down the steps and she couldn't even make it to the littler box downstairs. She had softer bloody stool the following 3 days and now she is back to her normal stool however the blood is much less and we are on day 7. She has been drinking normally the entire time but since she is not interested in the canned food at all we have determined through the process of elimination that this is the source of the problem. It's hard to say if the 3 barn cats experienced similar issues since they don't use a littler box.	3	Years	Cat	Unknown	8	Pound

In late December, I noticed (b) (6) was having increased thirst and urination, increased panting, and weight loss. My vet found that she had developed a heart murmur and her thyroid levels were high. An ultrasound, x-rays, and a thyroid scintigraphy scan revealed no tumors that could be causing the high levels. The veterinarian who performed the scintigraphy scan, (b) (6), advised me that the dietary cause for thyrotoxicosis in dogs is usually beef jerky-type treats. He said he has never seen it caused by chicken treats. The only food or treat I was feeding (b) (6) regularly that isn't made of chicken, turkey, or fish, is American Jerky Bison Recipe Bars that I purchase at Petco Unleashed in (b) (6). EON-245520	2/4/2016 21:04	Country Kitchen Two-Toned Porkhide Twist	My boyfriend had bought our dog a Country Kitchen Two-Toned Porkhide Twist at a local Dollar General Store. The package did not appear to have been opened or tampered with prior to us opening it. Our dog had carried it around for a few days, but did not seem interested in chewing, or eating it. One day he decided he wanted to eat it and ate about half of the treat. We did not notice any difference in his behavior that day. The next evening he was chewing on it again, and immediately after he went into the bedroom and laid down. I went into the room and laid with him, and about a half hour to an hour after this he started convulsing and was having what appeared to be a seizure. It was mainly restricted to his head and neck, but his whole body was tense and he was having trouble breathing, so we called the local emergency clinic and rushed him over as fast as possible as he has never had even a minor seizure or tremor since we have had him and we have had him since he was seven weeks old. He came out of the episode on the way over to the clinic and upon arrival he was alert and his energy level was back to normal like nothing had happened. The clinic took his temperature, checked his heart rate, gums, and did blood work. Everything came back normal and they recommended we monitor him at home and sent us with a vile of injectable valium incase it occurred again and he was unable to come out of it. He had another episode minutes after we got home. Again, it was mainly restricted to his head and neck and last around five minutes before he came out of it. He seemed coherent during the episode and was able to walk around, but his head and neck were shaking and bobbing rapidly. He continued to have episodes almost every hour, each of which seemed to decrease in severity and duration. He was coherent during each episode and would even wag his tail and respond to our voices. We had him sit and would message his neck and head during the episodes and it seemed as though once we were able to get him to focus on us, he would come out of the episode. He had a total of seven episodes ranging from 9:30pm to 4:45am. He went to the bathroom right before his episode at 4:30, which was the most minor one of the night and he did not have another episode after that. We were able to get him in for an emergency visit with his	1.5	Years	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	54.6	Pound

They said there was a small trace of yeast in his stool and gave us some probiotics to use for the next week. They also said his blood work was completely normal, the only test that was slightly off was his GLOB level, which appeared to be a little low. They said this could suggest a slight immune deficiency, but that it was nothing to be alarmed about. We brought in the rawhide chew as it was the only abnormality that we could think of in his environment in the last couple of days, and he had never had one before. Our vet said that there is a chance that he could have had an allergic reaction and that the chew obviously had dye in it as it had a red band of rawhide that wrapped around it along with the normal tanish colored rawhide. She recommended looking on the FDA sight to see if there had been any recalls on the product and that we should go back to the store to get another one as we no longer had the original package that it came in. She suggested that we report the incident to the FDA and said that she could have it sent away for a toxicology report if we needed to. Our dog is very health and has not had another episode since that evening. His bowel movements have been normal and so has his appetite. The only ingredient listed on the chew was pork hide and it said that it was treated by irradiation. It also states that it was manufactured in China.

EON-245332	2/4/2016 12:20	9 Lives Tender Slices With Real Beef in Gravy	4-5 weeks ago i bought several cans of cat food from Grocery Outlet on (b) (6) in (b) (6). this was because the grocery store no longer stocked dry food and as an "emergency" i bought two cans until I could buy the regular food. I fed half a can to my cat and he vomited later that afternoon and had diarrhea. I immediately threw out the can and held back the second can to have as a sample for any calls to the manufacturer or for analysis. I also wanted to take a wait and see approach to see if there were confounding factors like some other disease, but my cat showed no signs of any illness a day after the vomiting incident. Three days ago a family member not knowing what happened opened the second can and fed half to my cat (b) (6). the cat was fine for a few hours then had diarrhea and vomited three times in the next 2 days. The cat became lethargic and hid in quiet places -- which is atypical as this cat is very vocal and friendly even to strangers. Indeed, without bias as I have owned other animals in the past, this cat is far more intelligent and proactively social so this behavior is abnormal. The vet at (b) (6) stated that the cat likely had enteritis then pancreatitis caused by infection that has affected bile duct and / or liver as the cat is now jaundiced. The ONLY thing different about environment for this cat was the food ... I searched online and for the same period that I bought this food (December), there are not just a few but MANY MANY complaints that this food sickened cats causing them to vomit and become lethargic or even die. I cannot believe that this is still occurring without some kind of recall or investigation. 9 lives by del monte foods... EON-245258	2/3/2016 23:20	Hill's Science Diet Mature Adult Active Longevity Small Bites Dry Dog Food Bag 33-Pound	I am an owner of two dogs and I have been feeding them Science Diet pet food for the past 9 years. I opened a new bag of dog food on Saturday, 1/30/2016 after ensuring that there were no bite marks or tears/openings on this bag. (I usually do this because I received one packet which once had a hole in it and I contacted the distributor about it). I have been feeding my dogs this food for the past 4 days. Today, February 3, 2016 (Wednesday) night, I noticed that there was a dead mouse in it; it was dead and had white fungii growing on it too. I took a few pictures and discarded the food along with the container. I have the original packaging that I dug out of the trash can for help in tracking the manufacturing lot. I have just notified the manufacturer via a link in their website as well (Hill's Pet Nutrition, Science Diet)

EON-245253	2/3/2016 20:32	Hill's Prescription Diet HD Heart Care	On (b) (6) I opened one of the two new bags of Hills Prescription HD Cardiac Care Dry Dog Food I had recently purchased. The packaging had been sealed and I observed nothing different than what I always observed from the product. (b) (6) received his normal quantity for the morning feeding(I feed both dogs their daily amount divided into 4 portions and given at morning, noon, later afternoon, early evening). (b) (6) my other beagle, who does not have any significant health issues or medication needs, likes the HD product more than her own regular dog food and so on that occasion as I often do she got her regular food(from same big bag that had been used for weeks) plus a small portion of Hills HD as a "treat". This was a common occurrence. (b) (6) never gets any of her food as I feed them separately and no food is left out. Both foods are stored in my house in same closet in kitchen with only foodstuffs. The next morning, (b) (6), I noticed (b) (6) had very loose stools. (b) (6) seemed very loose as well. I continued same food routine. On (b) (6) (b) (6) had mucous and pus spotted non formed stool. (b) (6) stool was non formed and very watery. At this time I became suspicious of the new batch of HD as that was the only thing in common both dogs shared(They are house dogs and only go outside in backyard supervised so it was not possible they consumed anything else). They also do not interact with other dogs. So on the (b) (6) I decided to stop giving (b) (6) HD as a treat. Because of (b) (6) low sodium diet needs(hence the HD) I made the decision(clearly wrong looking back now-I am so upset with myself and full of anguish) to continue giving him the HD assuming the new bag probably just has some minor ingredient variation that he would adjust to shortly. On (b) (6)(b) (6) BM had firmed up, while not completely normal it was noticeably improved. (b) (6) was about the same. On the (b) (6), (b) (6) was mostly normal, (b) (6) was about same. By night of (b) (6) and morning of (b) (6) (b) (6) had gotten explosive, all liquid, mucous and puss filled. Beginning on the (b) (6) I started giving (b) (6) only white rice and minced plain chicken in a water slurry trying to keep him hydrated and get diarrhea under control. It had no affect, he continued with horrible diarrhea through Monday. On Monday I called the vet, no appointment available until Tuesday. By Monday night (b) (6) was clearly showing extreme weakness and feebleness. On Tuesday vet determined (b) (6) was having massive arrhythmia causing very low ejection fraction and no good blood flow....he could no longer stand on his own during visit and was having difficulty breathing comfortably. Vet determined he was not dehydrated and I had done okay with that but the enteritis stress on him pushed his heart over the edge and he had nothing left. Vet did not think he could be saved so the decision was made to put him to sleep before he suffered a struggling death.	10	Years	Dog	Beagle	30	Pound

I do not know if it lost its flavor or if I did not store it correctly or what. I had it closed and inside a plastic tub container on the patio. I don't believe the weather was extremely hot. This is not the first time I have stored food on the patio. Since that time I have stored it in the house, hoping to have it tested. It is not expired. I think that after opening dry food, as long as it is closed and not expired, it is still safe to use. Is this correct ? The three cats are one year, 8 years and 13 years old, approximately. The oldest one has had diarrhea since that time, about oct 22, 2015 and I cannot seem to get him well. This is not the first time he has had kitten food. He has not had kitten food since that time. He did have tummy troubles about six months before this. If I know this food could have been the cause for this upset, maybe I would better know how to treat him for the diarrhea. I would be interested to know if this food could be any reason for this. The other two cats have not had any physical problems. I do not see where this product has ever been recalled. Am wondering if there has been any other complaints about this particular batch of food. I emailed purina about it and did not receive a response. thank you

He was perfectly fine up until Sunday night around 9pm he seemed to experience some stomach discomfort, he stomach was distended, he was shaking and then vomited. Earlier in the day on Sunday he was given Milo chicken Jerky treats and my guess was that he did not chew the treat and swallowed it whole. I had taken him for a walk and during the walk he had three bowel movements, all solid. On Monday he was still not feeling well, not eating and not walking and over the night his anal glands had spilled out all down his legs, around 1pm he went to stand up and fell over, I immediately brought him to the office. (b) (6) performed an exam, his temperature was taken, a rectal exam was performed and then she took him for an x-ray. When she returned she told me that she gave him some medicine to relieve the abdominal discomfort, she excreted his anal glands. The diagnosis was constipation, she told me that I should keep a close eye on him, encourage him to walk and he should move his bowels again that day. Later that evening I called because he had still not had any bowel movements, the vet I spoke to told me not to be concerned since it had only been five hours. On Tuesday I called again but unfortunately (b) (6) was not in the office. The vet I spoke to said I should not be concerned because he was not eating anything so that is probably why he has not moved his bowels. I was offered an appointment but opted to wait until Wednesday to see (b) (6) again and left a message for her to call me. On Wednesday I got a call from (b) (6) and she advised that I should bring him in today or tomorrow. I had my daughter leave work and drive him right over, he was seen about 11:30 that day. She examined him, took him for another x-ray and mentioned that his kidney were not functioning properly and recommended that we go in for exploratory surgery. Never once was I told he had any sort of Mass, I was still sure it was a Jerky treat that was causing his trouble. She called me about 1:15pm to advise she was brining (b) (6) in for surgery and did mention again about his kidneys and about 15 minutes later I was called again and told he had a mass. I came home the fifth day and she had sprayed the watery substance all over the living room and had thrown up in four different places and there was a large area of mucus that had a red tint to it and smelled sort of like that new rubber smell. I also noticed what appeared to be blood in the watery substance. I took her to my vet the following morning and was told that she had contracted a parasite. My vet did not say that it was linked to the dog food. However, that same day, I put her back on her regular food. That afternoon, she still had a very loose bowl movement, but there was some consistency to it. From then on, she improved greatly. I will say that the vet had prescribed anti-biotics and pro-biotics. I believe it was the dog food. Perhaps it was just the fact that I changed her food. I left outbid town and my Mother in law informed me that my dog was acting funny and she was very worried. She drank excessively and then vomited a lot of water. She was lethargic and acting unlike herself. She wouldn't eat at all for two days. She then had extreme diarrhea. Finally were able to get her to drink water again and eat some saltines. I returned home from my business trip on 1/23/16 and she was doing better. I then gave both dogs these treats. Approx 3-4 each within a 24 hour period. That afternoon returning from work my dog began to seize. She calmed and and an hour later I saw her seize again. This time it lasted a few minutes. I have video of this happening. She still was unlike herself and kept wanting to get outside. Possibly afraid of losing her bowels again. (She didn't want to be in trouble).	1.5	Years	Dog	Retriever - Labrador	70	Pound

EON-244038	1/28/2016 17:16	Rachel Ray Nutrish Super Premium Food for Cats Chicken Lover's Variety Pack	Prior to consuming "Nutrish", my cat, (b) (6), was healthy, indoor cat. She didn't eat any other food and she gets fresh water in a clean bowl with every meal. At the beginning of November, I fed (b) (6) chicken purr-cata and chicken catch-iatore. She got sick within twelve hours and has been sick ever since. Initially, she was vomiting & having bloody, mucous-y, diarrhea. I quit feeding her "nutrish" immediately. Now, almost three months later, she is still sick with intractable diarrhea. Lab work done one week ago shows elevated liver enzymes & decreased kidney function. I'm not buying the "high vitamin d levels" excuse that was used during the last recall of this food. These symptoms are consistent with exposure to an infectious agent or a toxic agent. There are many other people whose pets have suffered the same symptoms because of this food. I have samples of the food & I'd like it tested.	15	Years	Cat	Domestic Mediumhair	12	Pound

We purchase a new bag of Kirkland Nature's Domain Salmon and Sweet Potato from Costco at the end of December and began feeding dog from new bag approx January 8-10, 2016. This is the same food and only food that has been given to Jax since he was 5 months old. He became ill within a day or two and has had three hospital stays, gets better and then as soon as we resumed food, he became ill again. I didn't realize the pattern until this evening when we returned ONCE AGAIN to the vet with vomiting and liquid diarrhea. They had exhausted all testing to find cause. It was only when they asked me if the dog food bag was new that I realized the whole thing started when we opened the new bag. I googled " Nature's Domain" and found online complaints from the last few months about Nature's Domain. I called the company and told them. They denied it. Prior to this he was 100% healthy and no issues or problems. We bring him inside when it is extremely cold outside and he always has had adequate food and water. On Sunday 1.24.16, (b) (6) was not coming out of his cat shelter and his food had not been touched. The next day in the evening my daughter called me and stated she found him lying on the side of our house lethargic, unable to walk, and lightly meowing with shallow breathing. His 3rd eye was also beginning to show. I had to call an after hours emergency vet and rushed him there. The vet informed us that (b) (6) is 100% blocked in his bladder area and asked the food that he had been eating. He had been eating this food, which ALSO caused the same issue in my indoor 2 year old Fixed Calico which is being filed in a separate report. The vet said this cat food is way too high is ASH content and should not be given to anyones cats-ever. Bladder infections in cats can be fatal if not caught in time. This was 1 day worth of symptoms. Our cat was admitted on (b) (6) and will be at the vets office for several days as this made him extremely ill. This is VERY COSTLY, and the Mftg. of this food needs to have it pulled from the shelf. The name Forever Pals should be changed to SHORT TERM PALS. We also saw where she had thrown up multiple times. We took her to the vet and her liver enzymes were so high they were "off the charts" according to the vet. We treated her with antibiotics and S-Adenosylmethionine (SAME) per the recommendation of our vet. Subsequent testing showed that while the liver enzymes were not normal but that were significantly improved and we agreed to do additional testing at the end of the month. We changed our dogs diet to a healthier brand of dog food per the recommendation our vet, not because the brand we were using was suspected of causing issues but to help with her weight issues. On Jan 23 our daughter gave our dog a Pedigree Dentastix treat, that evening she threw up multiple times and the next day she displayed the very same symptoms as before - we watched her very closely and made note of all of her symptoms: tender belly area, no appetite, drank A LOT of water, and very listless. Since we were snowed in we were not able to take her to the vet. At first I thought omg he's having a reaction to the treat. I thought he was hallucinating but come to find out he was actually temporarily blind. I took him to an emergency er, then to my vet in the am when he opened. He is the one who diagnosed his stroke and sent me to a neurologist. The er vet told me he was reacting to something he ingested but she missed that he was having a stroke. I called the manufacturer and the first person I spoke to told me that fish oils can lower the blood pressure enough to have a stroke. There are no warning labels on this product. Then I was passed to the owner/vet of the company who offered me $500 but my dogs vet bills came to $4000. She said she investigated and found no wrong doing. BUT she admitted to me they were getting their ingredients from China. Their packaging is very misleading. It says in teeny tiny letters ingredients are imported but in large letters it says made in the USA. If I would have known this information I would have never given my dog this supplement. the neurologist did all kinds of testing and could not find a reason for my dog to have a stroke. There are no underlying health issues. No high blood pressure, no diabetes, no heart condition, normal thyroid function, blood work came back perfect. He's a healthy weight. I feed him super premium dog food. He's on hw prevention. I take very good care of my dog. I'm sorry but it is too much of a coincidence for my dog to have a stroke within a few hours of eating this treat. Google fish oils it states it can cause a stroke! Pet co nor Pet Naturals will do anything about this and I'm afraid dogs could be dying and people aren't putting 2 and 2 together. My dog now has to be on blood thinners as a precaution because the vet is worried because they couldn't find a reason for his stroke. I contacted a lab to have the product tested because I dopid not throw the product away. It costs $3900 to have it tested and opi don't have the money to do it. Arms were paddling, urinated on himself, eyes rolled back in head. Other dog, (b) (6) age 10 seemed fine. Rushed dog to animal hospital, and they said he had a seizure and is in critical condition. They immediately started questioning what he ate that day as they felt it was due to toxic poisoning. I left Animal Hospital about 45 minutes later, to go home to pick up phone charger, and when I got home, my other dog, (b) (6), was down on floor-comotose and unresponsive. Rushed him to hospital. Both are now on life support with little hope for survival. We narrowed it down to the food they ate for dinner, since this is the only thing that they ate together. EON-241814	1/18/2016 14:00	Hills Science Diet Mature Adult Dry Dog Food	I purchased a bag of science diet dry dog food at Petsmart on (b) (6) (b) (6) I always put the dog food in a sealed container after getting it home to keep pests and bugs out of the food. I found a dead rat in one of the scoops of dog food. It made me so ill I was sick to my stomach just knowing I had been feeding my dog this food. I have never ever seen a rat like this in this area. I am positive it came from the dog food processing plant. I took a picture and let the manager of petsmart aware of the issue. I also sent this picture to the Hills Coporation. They sent me two ten dollar coupons. I replied and let them know that I will never buy science diet dog food again. I have been buying this food for all of the dogs I have had through the years. My dog has been real sick lately. He did get bit by a coyote but I think he was already sick from the food. The vet said he had never seen a dog get this sick from a coyote bite. My dog blew up like a balloon as if he had a allergy to something or a strange illness. As sick as it makes me I still have the rat and think it should be tested. If you know the local agency that does this sort of thing please let me know. I am very afraid this rat was sick from the start and was carrying a disease.

We also suspect the boarders may be at fault for providing tainted food, as they are already in breach of contract when they failed to contact me, my emergency contact and the veterinarian, as per my previously directive; we requested the serial number from the food source, but (b) (6) said that "the bags are emptied into the food bins and we don't keep them." I am writing this letter with grave concern regarding the failure of promised compliance by your facility personnel regarding my specific and repeated verbal directives towards the proper care, health and welfare regarding my two cats, (b) (6) and (b) (6), who were boarded at your facility from (b) (6) until (b) (6). As I have mentioned in the past, these are not only pets, but are considered FAMILY

			I have mentioned in the past, these are not only pets, but are considered family to me! As I was exhausted, I did not realize how crucially sick they actually were, especially (b) (6), until about 15 minutes later, driving back to my home in (b) (6) (b) (6), with my increasingly recognizing how sick (b) (6) was through severe, strange, never-before-seen behaviors and symptoms becoming increasingly more severe as time went on, until finally realizing how serious his condition was. This has NEVER happened in the ENTIRE TIME I EVER OWNED EITHER CAT!!!! I hope you investigate any underlying cause that might be a threat to other animals being boarded at your facility. I also had to endure other disruptions upon picking them up, even after notifying you by phone that I was arriving from Honolulu around 1pm, the first time I believe that I was first informed of ANY ADVERSE HEALTH CONCERNS that 'there was a small amount of blood found in (b) (6) cage, but not now an issue/none found since a few days ago. This statement alone, is a reason for you to have immediately contacted the veterinarian information that I had left with your office when I dropped them off. I had a vet! NO ONE ever ONCE informed me that my older cat, (b) (6) had bloody diarrhea and/or bloody stools and other symptoms of lethargy, profuse drooling and panting, watery eyes, crying, and their abnormal symptoms, etc., and only once did Carrie actually mention and minimize (b) (6) condition as "a little blood in the tools, reported on 3/25...this is just WRONG, as you KNOW that I INSISTED that upon IMMEDIATE DISCOVERY OF ANY ADVERSE or ABNORMAL HEALTH CONDITION, there should be immediate contact to me, my designated emergency contact (my mother, who was also never once notified), AND my designated Veterinarian." None of my directives were followed! And as I proceeded home, I progressively realized that (b) (6) was seriously and completely abnormally ill while proceeding home, and I immediately started calling family and friends, including an emergency vet in (b) (6) to meet him as I came into town...it was THAT URGENT AND SERIOUS!!! I also contacted my step father who is a veterinarian and agrees that this was serious and I did the right thing taking him immediately to the emergency where he needed immediate attention.

On the trip home from your facility, I called another friend to obtain urgent/emergency information to find out anything he could about Kirkland" cat food, and he informed me that there had already been two recalls on that particular brand. immediate and urgent emergency information about what could possibly be causing this abnormal symptoms, and also contacting a friend for information for emergency vet services We later found out that there was a recall as recent as less than 1 year ago on their dog foo, and I later found out that there was a recall in 2007 on cat food. I specifically asked you for a serial number, which you told me was impossible to provide, as you stated that "we open the bags and pour them into the bins and don't retain the bags."

I called my mother while waiting for my flight in (b) (6), as soon as you informed me about finding blood in (b) (6)s cage, completely omitting the more serious state of health concern regarding (b) (6) and she told me to get reports and find out whatever I could, which is what I did immediately upon my arrival at your facility to pick them up.

We also had to endure the interruptions, with had several cats coming in, INTERRUPTING the check-out process that we had started, when another client started bringing in pets who were not in kennels or otherwise restrained. I find this to also be a safety failure, as there is a loose "resident German Shepard", who

			you claimed was a "long term boarder/resident constantly nuisance barking and causing stress to both my cats and myself, never once attempting to seriously quiet the dog. I hope you will consider this nuisance in the future as well as the safety and comfort concerns. We had to endure violation dog barking for many years, and your office knew that I am sensitive, especially as that dog barks extremely loud...I hope something is done about his bad behavior, as this reflects very poorly on your level of professional training capability. I was seriously distraught after picking them up while I was in an exhausted state after extensive travel back to the islands, only to find the agreements to notify me and the appointed veterinarian were NOT adhered to. As a result of this, and the resulting SERIOUS concern for my cats' welfare and safety, I was forced to take them immediately to an emergency, after-hours veterinarian in (b) (6). especially paying attention after getting those reports, and seeing how progressively WORSE (b) (6) was becoming...I have NEVER had a problem with him like that, especially when returning home!!! The vet did mention his concern about "something going on at PAWS, especially as BOTH cats were sick and blood was reported in both of their cages AFTER I came to pick them up, only being notified by Carrie that "a little blood was found in (b) (6) cage", while on the phone with her in (b) (6), to which I hold you liable and fully responsible for completely failing to following my explicit instructions to IMMEDIATELY contact me, the designated veterinarian facility (b) (6) and emergency contacts on file should ANYTHING PUT OF THE ORDINARY be found." Had I known at that time that blood had been found in BOTH cats' cages I would have immediately asked you directly to take them to the vet immediately! As a result of this irresponsible behavior and a breach of contract, I was compelled to put a hold on my credit card regarding this concern and I am asking for a settlement in the amount of $804.00, the total cost for boarding them at your facility, as this was especially a breach of contract that caused BOTH me and my cats great harm, with what I felt was complete negligence (in fact, intentionally

			causing great harm, with what I felt was complete negligence (in fact, intentionally causing to hide deeper problems and minimizing how serious their condition actually was); this includes my stress and suffering, as well as my babies, leaving a total amount due to your facility as $0.00. Your agreement to this amount is favorable, especially considering the adverse conditions of my pets under your trusted care, and your knowledge of my personal hardships, with this situation causing even greater harm to both me and my pets...my (b) (6) As I am extremely concerned that in the past I had to endure a horrible experience with previous personnel, and was told by Allan that that would never happen again, as well as "putting the cats together", as facility personnel stated was the case in the past boarding, I told the previous office manager about, even under strict request upon dropping them off in the past, was to keep them separated during feeding, but your facility also violated that request in the past. This has just gone too far and is completely unacceptable behavior by ANY professional who is DIRECTLY, PERSONALLY AND PROFESSIONALLY RESPONSIBLE for the health, care, and welfare for those entrusted under that care. Had I even SUSPECTED a food issue, I had a full bag of Science diet here, but as food has never been an issue in the past (to my knowledge), I hope you investigate the cause of this! I feel that this incident was completely in violation of trust, and this is therefore the basis for my decision. At the very LEAST, a veterinarian should have at LEAST been CONSULTED, but that was not even done, nor was I ever contact regarding (b) (6) until AFTER I had made the request in person to obtain files. Only THEN were further records revealed that (b) (6) had been having serious issues 2 days

prior to my picking them up on 3/26/13, and even that Makika was reported to have had "blood in her cage" several days prior, but I was NOT NOTIFIED until I called on 3/26/13, completely exhausted already from my travels. I had wanted to actually stay in (b) (6) but when I had heard that "there were concerns", I immediately went to your facility upon landing, specifically to pick them up, once realizing the importance of and being alerted of the concern.

Cats bloody diarrhea due to kirkland/Costco cat food at boarding in (b) (6), (b) (6)

BOTH of my cats were immediately taken to emergency vets upon my return home in (b) (6) They were boarded at (b) (6) pet boarding. I need to know if any other cats or dogs boarded there who were also being fed Kirland/Coscto brand (already recalled in 2007, and 2012) by the (b) (6) boarding facility mentioned above. This is a grave concern for the welfare, health and safety of my pets, as well as others whose "family" members could also be susceptible to adverse health effects.

			I contacted FDA today and left contact info, requesting IMMEDIATE/Urgent all back...recording says 2-3 days return (even for emergencies!!-That definitely needs a change in policy/improved EMERGENCY/LIFE THREATENING protocols!) I contacted 3 vets, two in (b) (6), and the 3rd vet, a renowned and highly reputable veterinarian, who is a long time, established (b) (6) DVM living, in (b) (6). They all suspect SOMETHING is up at the boarders/cat food, as NEITHER cat has ever been sick to near this level, EVER!...and BOTH cats had problems, not just one was sick...All other cats there were being fed OTHER food, but there was confusion about those "facts"...In the past the same boarders had put both cats together to make room for other cats, even though I had been assured otherwise, and they were directed (and I paid for) each cat to have their OWN SEPARATE CAGES!!! I SHOULD HAVE filed a complaint back then when finding out, but was too worried about my father's survival/health. This time I am contacting all authorities because people should have IMMEDIATE ACCESS to government investigators who immediate investigate life threatening emergencies, suspicious activity...I even just contacted my local PD Capt. Questions: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Has anyone else experienced this with their pets with this brand or with this boarder...please elaborate if you have had probs! 2) Who did you contact? 3) Please provide a DIRECT access number for any government representatives who can help, including a REPUTABLE attorney in (b) (6). 4) Please notify Yahoo administration if you can provide direct information...pets may be okay, but this needs to IMMEDIATELY be investigated! My babies are indoor only, and VERY healthy-epitome of health; they were dropped off in prime/peak condition. They HAVE had to be boarded in the past 2 other times, once for 1 month, the other for three months when my father was in ICU in (b) (6)...no incidents back then...unsure of food source. The oldest cat is about 12, and the youngest is 3-4 yrs..they are eating okay, but on a strict human food/baby food diet as prescribed by the top vet, being fed in moderate, measured amounts...better but still concerned..thanks again to any contributors! Thanks for any help...God bless you and keep you and your pets safe! 5 days ago - 1 day left for voting

The next day I put her in her kennel before I went to work. She didn't want to go in as usual. When I came home she had urinated all over the pad and the bottom of the kennel which is something HIGHLY out of character and something she had NEVER EVER done before. She was very upset about it and I let her out of the kennel encouraging her that it was ok. She wasn't her usual happy highly energetic self. She was lethargic. I noticed that she had not touched her food. I thought maybe she just had a bug of some sort and kept an eye on her. That night after I went to bed, she had urinated on the couch, then upstairs on the floor and also in her bed. I found her in the morning, lethargic, sad, and not even getting up to greet me. I took her to the vet's at 7:00 am. They took her right in. She went downhill from there, was incredibly ill and died 2 days later on (b) (6). I had lots of tests done, but there is a suspect it was the bone. I have the vet's report. She was a beautiful, healthy, loving dog who we greatly miss. EON-241443	1/12/2016 19:40	Wellness Senior Formula	Purchased twelve cans of Wellness Senior Formula, and fed four cans in two weeks period, mixed with kibble. Both dogs had bouts of loose stools and stomach distress. When I opened the fifth can, sliced open the food, the center core (from top to bottom) had foreign substances extruded in it. It was definitely not dog food. I took photos, froze the food, and contacted the manufacturer via their website. I had no "link" to send photos. EON-241426	1/12/2016 14:56	Purina Pro Plan Savor Shredded Blend Chicken and Rice Formula	I bought a bag of dog food because we were running out and purchased the dog food from Pet's Mart. Within 1-2 days after starting the new bag (b) (6) began to develop diarrhea. This is the same food that we always use. I put (b) (6) on a bland soft diet of chicken broth, chicken, and rice and he ate that for a few days while the diarrhea continued. The diarrhea began on a Saturday night and by Wednesday he was pooping blood. I took (b) (6) the vet and they did a stool sample as well as took blood work and found nothing. The vet sent me home with some anti-diarrheal medication and (b) (6) became symptom free within 2 days. Upon return to my home from the vet on Wednesday, my 85lb. lab was now showing the same symptoms as (b) (6) which include lethargy, blood in stool, diarrhea, and accidents in the house. The big dog was started on the bland diet and also given the same medicine as (b) (6). Today marks day 9 days of diarrhea between the two dogs. (b) (6) was started on regular food on Friday evening 1/9/15. Today is 1/12 and he has begun having diarrhea again.	6	Years	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	28	Pound

After taking them outside around 10:30 p.m. on the 9th, we put them each to bed in their crates for the night. I am filling out this report for (b) (6), (b) (6), and (b) (6) who are all pugs. All the fill in info on the form pertains to (b) (6) and her reaction. (b) (6) is 3 years old and in excellent health, (b) (6) is 9 years old and naturally blind but in good health (b) (6) and (b) (6) also reacted to the dog food, but not as severely. I believe they were able to vomit most of it out of their systems. They are still under the weather, but recovering nicely at home with a bland diet and electrolyte replacements. (b) (6) is still emaciated and having uncontrollable, foul smelling diarrhea, but the blood and mucus is diminishing. She is not wanting to eat much food. EON-241411	1/12/2016 9:48	Purina One Sensitive Systems Adult Cat Food	Owner purchased different food because she was unable to purchase regular "organic" food that she usually buys and was completely out of cat food. That night, she placed 2 bowls of the newly purchased Purina One food out for all cats (1 bowl per 2 cats, in separate rooms). The following day, 1/4 of one bowl was eaten (presumably by (b) (6)), other bowl was untouched, and therefore food was not refilled that day (1/1). The next morning, numerous piles of blood-tinged vomitus were found around the house. (b) (6) was taken the emergency clinic that day, where supportive care (medications, instructions to feed bland diet) was provided for presumed gastritis associated with an abrupt diet change. The cat improved slowly over the next 48 hours, no more vomiting appreciated, and he was back to normal within 3-4 days. He was diagnosed with an upper respiratory tract infection 2 days after the emergency clinic visit for gastritis, which may or may not have been associated with his GI upset.	11	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	16.5	Pound

EON-241235	1/9/2016 16:40	No*Hide Chicken Chews	I am the veterinarian and Owner. About 3 weeks ago, I gave him a No Hlde Chicken Chew by Earth Animal. He has had them on a several other occasions without concern. On this evening, several hours after eating it, he developed a very wet cough and repeated issues with gagging. It eventually resolved with vomiting up a piece of the rawhide. On (b) (6), he got another one. That evening (several hours later), he developed a very wet cough. He vomited a few times that morning, but only bile. He goes to work with me at a veterinary hospital. Throughout the day, he vomited 2-3 more times-- food and small pieces of rawhide. Then approximately, 22 hours after ingestion, he collapsed while urinating and developed a neurological issue called oposthotonos. It seemed to resolve within a minute, and then occurred again 15 minutes later. An IV was placed and he was given Diazepam. His mentation and ability to walk was otherwise not affected. I took him home. He had 2 more episodes that night. The next day, he was slow, but had no additional episodes. He currently seems stable. While oposthotonos is a nonspecific neurological issue, is generally is something either related to brain swelling or herniation, and since he did not worsen to seizures this is unlikely, or most often it is related to toxins. Thus my concern.	10	Years	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	110	Pound

I noticed her back was humped but she didn't act like she was in pain. She slowed on her eating. Was very picky about food. Always loved the jerky treats though. Around November or beginning of December she started acting strangely. She was hiding food all around in the house. She then would wander around the outer walls of the house and behind the furniture. We couldn't figure it out. (b) (6) she started losing her balance. Took her to the Vet. He thought she had an ear infection. Gave her antibiotics and medicine for discomfort. Wednesday we gave her a sonic burger plain and she loved that. She started acting wobbly again. Took her back to the Vet Thursday. Then onto vomiting up bile, by the third day, upon finding him lying in his own vomit, I took him to the vet. He had all symptoms of salmonella poisoning. EON-240472	1/2/2016 0:16	Purina Friskies	After eating friskies canned breakfast on several different occasions both cats have vomited the entire amount of what they consumed shortly after consuming the product. I had been buying the breakfast food for several months and in the beginning they loved it and there were no issues. But after several months I started to notice that when opening the can it kinda looked like the gravy content on the top of the can was curdled. Then when they started vomiting I was somewhat convinced it was due to what I thought was curdling. I returned the cans I had left in the cabinet to the stop and shop I had purchased them in and exchanged them for different flavors. I then noticed that in 2 stop and shops that I frequent, they have not had the breakfast variety on the shelves anymore, so I thought they must have been recalled. Then I saw the breakfast variety in a key food that I stopped in, and thought to check the FDA website and report my concerns.	10	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair

My vet said nonprescription food was a low residue food just like the prescription formula. I had them all eating the same food because one of my other cats was constantly having diarrhea and it is too hard to feed them all different foods. Within four days my (b) (6) started throwing up constantly and then didn't want to eat at all. She seemed ok eating the food during the first few days. She became more lethargic and just wanted to go be by herself. I couldn't even hardly get her to eat canned food and she is a big fan of that. I stopped the food in the evening of 12/27/15 and put her on a wheat/soy/corn free food called Wellness which she had eaten years before. EON-240061	12/28/2015 16:36	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition Chicken Flavor Dog Food	We had to change from a good dog food (Natural Balance) when my husband lost his job. We had purchased the Pedigree chicken dog food new recipe Adult Complete Nutrition - Meatier at Wal-Mart around July 2015 and the UPC 23100103396 on the bag says it was manufactured at Mars Tennessee. Expiration Date 4/28/16. This new recipe did not look like the old Pedigree Adult Chicken flavor dry dog food we had been using for a couple months. Our two dogs quickly became very sick simultaneously. A short time after using this dog food it made our two dogs have lethargy and constant gagging, coughing, vomiting and eating grass. When we stopped the dog food this all stopped too and they improved quickly so we didn't have to go to the vet which was our next plan. We now see where others found fibers and metal specs in this dogfood. We just looked and there are a lot of fibers in the kibbles of our dog food too that feel prickly and strong not like processed pig hair at all. If this is pig hair like Pedigree says then I want to see some DNA analyses and a statement about why they are processing pigs with chicken flavored dog food. Another pet owner had very sick dogs and their vet looked at this fiber and said it was plastic not pig hair. Whatever it is in the bag it is dangerous to feed it to your dogs. I would not expect plain old pig or dead dog hair to cause these illnesses. It has been about 5 months and now we feed them ORGANIX and they are happy and healthy with absolutely no symptoms.	8	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	14	Pound

I stopped giving her wet food which is not Purina to see what was causing it and thinking that the wet food would cause more of a problem. The wet food is not Purina. So i started asking my friends thinking that maybe it could be the food. Maybe a bad batch. Shes had all her shots and I got her from a shelter and I believed they dewormed her as well. Plus her stool is light in color and don't see any worms. She didn't have this issue before. I started to worry because she was also acting kind of off. So today I stopped giving her the dry food and instead made her rice and tuna. She did not have Diarrhea afterward like she had been with the dry food. I am out of tuna so I am mixing a little bit of wet food with the rice (not purina) so she will eat it until I can get her back on track and get her some new different kind of food. We feed him a mix of the Chicken Dinner, and the Salmon Diner foods. We haven't had issues with the food until May of this year (2015). On May 17th 2015 I fed the cat his morning meal. I remember that he left the food down for a while, but he eventually ate it. He is not normally a picky eater. About 10 minutes later, he started to cry, and ran to his bed. He began to vomit violently. It was projectile vomit and it was continuous so that he would gasp for air between heaves. He vomited up all of the food. I had to wash him off to clean the vomit off of him. After cleaning him up I made notes on the can with the date of the issue, wrote down what happened on a note and put it in the can, so I wouldn't forget what happened, and stored the can away in the cellar in case it happened again. The cat was lethargic for the rest of the day, but he had recovered fully by the next morning. The expiration dates on the food is normally so far out that I wanted to make sure I had the lot number on hand for future reference. The lot number on this can is: 50441157 L7GA20057 with a "Best By" Date of February 2017. Yesterday (12/23/15) I fed him a can of the Salmon Diner cat food, and he gagged and recoiled from it. He refused to eat it. I had noticed that the food was very dark when I was feeding him, but I had not noticed anything else strange about the food. I left it down, and after a few minutes I noticed a rancid odor. It was the food. I threw it away, washed the dish and gave him a can of the Chicken Dinner. He ate it without issue. Tonight, I grabbed a can of food for his dinner. The same thing happened. He gagged and backed away from the food. I noticed that again it was the Salmon Dinner. I checked the lot numbers on the bottom of the can with the can from yesterday. They matched. I immediately dumped the food, scrubbed out his dish and gave him the Chicken Diner. He ate the chicken dinner without issue.	5 Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	9	Pound
			The lot numbers on the two cans that the cat refused to eat are: 52871157 L5GA21839. The "Best By" date on the food is October 2017. I looked up if there are any active recalls on the Friskies canned cat foods and found out that there are several plants that have been warned for deviations in the food processing. One of the listed flavors was the Salmon Diner. I wanted to make this report to provide any detail possible that these cans may be making cats sick. I lost a cat years ago during the huge pet food recall, and I find it absurd that these companies are again trying to cut corners at the risk of the health of their customers pets. I take this issue seriously, and I do what I can to care for my pet as best as I can. I think that these companies need to be accountable, and that the FDA needs to do more than just "warn" the plants. If they have not made corrections this needs to be addressed.

When I used up previous product and was able to start using the 20 lb bags, both bags ended up being "infested" with light yellow worms and long, little black bugs. I notified the company who sold them to me, and he replaced the food with the smaller, plastic bags of pellets. I have not ordered the 20 lb bags of pellets since then, and only have been ordering the 2.5 lb and 3 lb bags of M and ML pellets. I still have copies of the email and pictures that I sent to vendor from this issue that I can provide to you. Now, for the past few months, I would guess that more than half of the smaller, plastic bags I've received have the same little black bugs in them. I usually find the bugs in the bottom of the bags after I cut them open and empty most of the contents into air-tight containers. The bugs are alive and some of the bags have many more bugs and bugs crawling around inside the top of the bag. I opened a Medium bag today (12/24/15) and it has the same bugs in the bottom as the Medium Large (ML) bag I opened earlier this week. The Medium Large Bag has Lot #09215 812607195, use by 01/31/17. The Medium Bag has Lot # 09015 809806235, use by 12/31/16. In addition, I have more unopened bags that were just delivered this week from (b) (6) and (b) (6). I notified them through their web site customer service since the previous bags were purchased from them. Until now, I thought the worms and bugs were just a fluke since I didn't notice the bugs for some time after the last issue in 2013. However, since I have received more bags recently with many noticeable bugs in them and I thought it was time I reported it. ZuPreem's manufacturing and bagging facilities need to be investigated and inspected. These bird pellets should not be sold with little black bugs or worms, dead or alive. I would like it if you can find out where the bugs are coming from and how the are ending up in many, if not all of the bags, and make ZuPreem eradicate the bugs. I don't really think I should be feeding my birds this food anymore, which is a shame since they love the food, and it's a shame that I've wasted good money on their buggy product. I have the packaging of the ML and M bags and some pictures. The ML bag still has a bunch of little black bugs in the bottom. The M bag had at least 3 little black bugs in it that I saw and removed them, and just looked and I saw another bug in the bottom of the bag. This is very disturbing and I truly hope this issue is resolved so I can still purchase this ZuPreem Natural and not have to worry about finding bugs or worms in the bags.

Later in the night, she was then given a bowl of grits and small amount of breakfast sausage, which she consumed. Overnight and into the next day (b) (6) (b) (6) vomited the contents of her stomach (grits & sausage, water). Eventually, the vomit was only bile. We took her to the vet the afternoon of (b) (6) where the vet identified that she was dehydrated and administered both anti-nausea medicine and fluids under the skin. (b) (6) vomited once more as soon as she returned from the vet; the remainder of the day she consumed no food or water. On (b) (6) we returned with (b) (6) to the vet as the condition hadn't improved. Though she did eat a very small amount of boiled, shredded chicken (perhaps a tablespoon) early in the morning, she really was not eating or drinking, and constantly salivating. The vet ran a blood test, and identified that she appeared to have a renal condition. He inserted an IV and placed her on fluids. He also administered antibiotics in the event the condition was caused by leptospirosis or some other infectious agent. He recommended that she spend the night at the emergency clinic. We transferred her to the clinic, where (b) (6) remained on IV fluids overnight, was provided additional anti-nausea medicine and continued the antibiotic treatment. On (b) (6) blood tests revealed that (b) (6) renal condition was worsening, with BUN, creatinine and phosphor levels substantially increasing. I believe the vet switched her antibiotic to a stronger, broader spectrum drug. Fluids were continued. The vet also performed a urinalysis which revealed protein in her urine.	5.5	Years	Dog	Weimaraner	77	Pound

On (b) (6) with conditions still worsening, the vet performed plasma transfusions hoping to restore proteins to her blood and increase her albumin levels. While the transfusions performed as intended, her renal conditions slightly worsened. Antibiotics and fluids were continued.

On (b) (6) we returned to her normal vet, who referred us to the (b) (6) (b) (6). Upon arrival that afternoon, the (b) (6) vet explained our limited options. We chose to start furosemide, hoping that the diuretic would flush her kidneys and potentially kickstart their function. While the drug was not immediately responsive, it did eventually cause (b) (6) to urinate the excess fluids in her body overnight and through the morning.

On (b) (6) we requested a blood test to assess the state of (b) (6) kidneys. Unfortunately, the vet noted that (b) (6) renal values had worsened--while furosemide did help her produce urine, (b) (6) kidney function remained absent.

At this point, we felt that (b) (6) had been poked and prodded enough. While she was still alert, she was beyond tired and probably starving though she would not eat. She was extremely lethargic, though she still had the power to walk. She did need help getting into the car. We made the 5 hour drive back to (b) (6), where she tried to sleep but appeared in great discomfort probably preventing her from getting any meaningful rest. Toward the end of the ride, her respiration became quick short pants instead of the normal, deeper breathing. Once back in our hometown, we returned to the vet, and let her go.

From the onset of the renal condition diagnosis, we scoured the house and yard looking for any potential toxins or infectious agents that may have caused or contributed to the condition.

(b) (6) is not known to hide evidence of what she gets into. - Our backyard is completely fenced, and we have a doggie door that allows both dogs free access to the backyard as they please. The backyard is partially wooded. We normally have birds, squirrels and turtles, and the occasional broadheaded skink. While on occasion, (b) (6) will chase squirrels, there is nothing (no animal/reptile carcass or scratch marks on her mouth/body) that would lead one to believe an encounter occurred. Normally (b) (6) only goes outside to relieve herself or play ball. The dog more likely to encounter wildlife (plants, animals) is the 7-year old intact male Weimaraner, (b) (6). While we cannot rule out an infectious agent, I would assess the probability is quite low. - The dogs stools are normally picked up from the yard once to twice weekly. It has been subjected to rain and the sprinklers. - We have had no open containers of chemicals (antifreeze, fertilizer, insecticide or pesticide)--and the closed containers are not stored in a location accessible to either dog. - Aside from the vomit, there was nothing inside that would indicate (b) (6) got into anything hazardous. - All of our medicines are kept in a cabinet. My wife (b) (6) is 7 months pregnant and therefore does not take any ibuprofen-containing medicines, and is precluded from taking many other medicines. With routine house cleaning and the general lack of use of OTC or prescription medicine, I'd again assess condition brought on by a medicinal toxin as very low. - There was no other evidence to suggest anything from the environment caused this reaction. - (b) (6) did have a history of Urinary Tract Infections from when she was born

I therefore don't know how easily it would be to rule out chronic kidney disease. All of us are going through our bouts of withdrawal and depression from the loss of (b) (6) We realize that filing this report is certainly not going to bring (b) (6) back. But we do feel it our duty to at least report the case, to help identify any potential trend of reports that may help prevent and save others' pets. My personal feeling is that IF the treat had any causality in the renal condition, it likely served as a catalyst for a congenital predisposition. Case in point-- (b) (6) consumed more treats from the same sample and does not appear to have experienced any symptoms of an adverse reaction. Unfortunately, with (b) (6) euthanized and cremation planned (complete in 6-8 weeks), it may be difficult to assess this case beyond the unused treats and vomit sample. (b) (6) was originally my wife's pet--I'm not certain how she'd handle a request for any sample of (b) (6) remains. Perhaps she'd be open to a request if she knew that a sample might result in saving other pets' lives. If you feel a sample would be fruitful, please notify ASAP; I'm not certain of the timeline to cremate (b) (6).

When I got home I opened the first bag to give the treats to my dog and they were covered in mold. The other bag looked safe. This is the second time I have gotten a moldy bag of treats. the first was about a week ago I bought the same treats from a Walmart and all the treats were moldy. Both instances the bags were not more than an hour old and I had just opened them to find mold in them.

EON-239460	12/19/2015 15:12	Blue buffalo wilderness indoor hairball control cat formula food	I purchased blue buffalo wilderness, indoor cat hairball control, kibble food, the small bags at Petsmart in (b) (6) on Black Friday, last month. I purchased 3 small bags and put them in a vital vault and disposed of the bags. Upon feeding the food my cats became lethargic, they did not want to eat. There was explosive diarrhea in the boxes. There was very fowl odored urine and diarrhea outside of the box which is highly unusual. They were puking all of their food up. Some showed symptoms earlier than others but everyone has experienced all of the above symptoms. After mental deduction I realized it was the new food. They have used this food for approximately 9 months with no visible problems. I did have some undigested food throw up during this 9 months but did not relate it to the use of this food. Upon research I have discovered blue buffalo has been untruthful about the ingredients in their food. I thought I was feeding grain free high quality meat based food. I spoke with my vet and he said IBD has been reported with use of blue buffalo by other vets. This would explain the symptoms prior to this recent incident. I am extremely upset that a company who is being sued for false advertising as it relates to the ingredients in their food, who has admitted to doing so, is still being sold in the major pet stores as a healthy option when it is obviously not. Consumers need to be made aware of this so they can make responsible food choices for their pets. I had no idea until I got this tainted batch. My cats are still showing symptoms with slow improvement. They are 100% indoor and up to date on all vet visits & shots.	8	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	9	Pound

Throughout her life, she has thrown up multiple times weekly. I just attributed this to a weak stomach. When I started her on the adult formula, she began throwing up almost daily, still, I was thinking it was just her weak stomach. In order to simply things, I decided to put my 6 y.o. husky (b) (6) on the same food. She begin vomiting the during the night, the same day I fed to her. I didn't think too much about so I kept feeding it to her. She too began to just randomly throw up. Both dogs also became increasingly aggressive acting with each other. EON-239251	12/17/2015 21:56	Caesars	Contacted the manufacturer about foreign objects that were found in the wet dog food container, case ID# 4084672, however, before I made the contact I found a sealed container (3.5 oz) filled completely with mold. I have contacted the manufacturer by email and requested their QA department to get back to me ASAP, but I have not received a response. I still have the product and I have photos. The name of the dog food is Caesar. I work in the quality field and I know how to document findings. I wanted to find out what processes had changed to cause these problems that never existed before. There was no outside damage to the product and the seal was not broken. My investigation leads me to believe that this issue came directly from the manufacture and packaging. This is a serious issue that must be addressed immediately and they did not contact me.

The vet told me maybe she could've gotten into some toxins and I said no I'm with her all day and she hasn't gotten into anything her mood and everything was always so normal always playful. As soon as I fed her Beneful for the first time she gets a seizure?? Vet says she looks as if she has Liver damage and that could've been from something she was consuming I told the vet she just started the Beneful dry dog food and they mentioned a recall on that brand of pup food ! I was shocked couldn't believe it. My healthy pup who was always so playful so happy now has liver damage ? And seizures to follow it ?! That was absurd ! My other puppy who is a pomchi 3 month old pup got sick as well. Him not so bad but he was very mopey in an almost sleepy character it was so odd to me. I was scared to take him to the vet as well after all the stuff that had been happening with my other pup. He looks very down and sad sometimes he whimpers and we don't know why . During the night, she meowed pitifully and Thursday morning 12/10 she seemed even worse. Took her in for ultrasound - vet said her she was full of fluid and gas - stomach and abdominal cavity - intestines and bowels full too. Looks like nothing moving. Sent me to Emergency clinic for surgery. (b) (6) (internist), (b) (6) (b) (6) (ultrasound) and (b) (6) (surgeon) did another ultrasound, confirmed our vet's suspicions and (b) (6) did emergency surgery. Her notes: Abdominal surgery found significant amount of fluid and food in stomach, diffusely dilated small intestines, normal mesenteric lymph nodes, normal liver-pancreas-kidneys, normal feeling adrenals. Collected biopsies. Contents of food very mucousy and malodorous. Everything lavage and suction. CAUSE OF VOMITING: The present cause of (b) (6) vomiting is Ileus or lack of movement in her stomach and intestines. (b) (6) also had high bacterial load in her bladder (confirmed with urine analysis). It is possible that the bacterial load in her bladder translocated to her blood and intestinal system causing disruption to normal movement. On 12/13, (b) (6) - 6 yr old healthy female who eats exactly the same food was taken to the same Emergency clinic with exactly the same symptoms: lethargy, vomiting, not eating - xray showing gas and fluids accumulating, food in stomach, stool in bowels - all not passing through the system. After this point, she looked lethargic, salivating, panting, and refusing to eat her dog food for dinner. My beagle is very food motivated and she refused to eat anything, even if I put cooked buffalo in her dog food. EON-237551	12/5/2015 1:20	Poopin Pumpkin	Due to the fact that the ferret is a client at our animal hospital and the person/ferret rescue is also our client, I need to remain anonymous. Client brought ferret to our facility having problems with diarrhea. He reported that he had been using this product called "Poopin Pumpkin" for two days prior to the visit. The product information claims to cure diarrhea in ferrets. He brought the product in at his second visit when the product did not help his ferret's condition and he believed it may also have exasperated the situation. Fortunately, we were able to stabilize the ferret. I have a couple concerns about this product. First and foremost, the seller does not appear to have had the product approved to meet FDA standards. Secondly it appears to be home made, the packaging nothing more than a Ziploc bag. While I can't say that the product caused the adverse reaction in the ferret, I can say that it didn't help. People that are relying on this product to cure diarrhea in a ferret are taking their ferret's life in their hands as dehydration can cause a ferret to go down hill very quickly and possibly die. Loose stools and diarrhea in ferrets can be indicative of several different illnesses, none of which could be cured by this product. i.e. virus, bacterial infection, coccidian. Giving this product in lieu of a visit to the veterinarian to find out the cause of the loose stool can in fact mask the problem, putting a band aid on the situation instead of curing the problem causing the diarrhea...There should at least be some instruction with the product to ALWAYS consult with your veterinarian prior to giving them anything like this. I believe the FDA needs to investigate this product further.	5	Years	Other		1.2	Pound

This is house dog (squeaky clean house) with nothing on floor and goes outside in a stroller or is in a car container when out so has not eaten anything foreign. The labs were just done 12/3/15. Not sure exactly when problem started as lab work just came back. I am not giving her this food again and will go to vet today to get other food for her and gave her baked sweet potato only for her night feeding last night. The vet said she is not sure why this is occurring, however I have read reports on the consumer website of many dogs having adverse effects from this food and to ensure that other people's pets do not have this problem in case it is related to the food I am filing this. I have 3 dogs miniature schnauzer 10yrs and Scottish terrier 7 yrs and my Pomeranian 2yrs. My dogs have never been sick always taking them to their vet regularly for shots and check ups. Two weeks after them eating the RR dog food my dogs were not as energetic and we're always tired and all three were constantly itching and as the time went by my dogs were eating a lot of grass and vomiting. My oldest dog has been having issues with vomiting and shaking and hair getting knotted and losing hair and no longer shinny and healthy and with My 2nd dog the Scotty she is vomiting and has a huge rash which has caused all her hair on her back, tail and back legs to fall of and her coat is very dry is bleeding from her back and no longer shinny and turned her hair turned to a brown color when her natural hair color is jet Black. My pomi has been vomiting and losing his hair in patches which I had to cut all his coat to the skin and as of yesterday morning dec 2nd 2015 6am there was trails of blood with mucus around my room looked like jelly/jam. Rushed my dog to his dr and did a few test and dr said it was something really fatty they have been eating which caused mucus in his stool and blood. Bc I don't give my dog table food it can only be one thing the RR dog food. When I got home noticed the food wasn't gone as fast it usual is, with blue buffalo I have to buy a bag every two wks and with this food it's been there a little over a month and when I touched the food it was greasy!feeling to it. Did save the remaining of the food bc did want to send the food to a test lab. I immediately changed there dog food after the emergency visit from the vet. since then the dogs have been eating little by little and drinking more water then usual but my pomi has not used the rest room since the incident and is on medication but have noticed a little energy coming and going so a good sign. I have talked to the dr and has asked me to continue to watch him until he poops so have taking a few days off until his off his medication and doing better and no longer bleeding.	3	Years	Dog	Other Canine/dog	12	Ounce

A few months later I was feeding my dog and found a pink piece of plastic in a piece of her food. This time I called Acana directly. The lady that answered my call asked me to send her the pictures of the pieces with plastic in them and she'd look into it and get back to me. A few weeks later she emailed me back and assured me that they scan all there food for metal fragments, but they had no way to scan for plastic. She said it must have come from a plastic tub that they store there fresh product in. She offered me a coupon, which I decined as I no longer feed this food to my dog.

I sent message through Petco website with all details and asked for reason for recall. Their response was vague and incomplete. Called Science Diet to inquire. They would only say they had implemented a "voluntary withdraw" of the product, no issue with food, a minor thing, but wouldn't not elaborate. Asked for a supervisor, but CSR said they were slammed with calls and would have to have someone call me back. What is the purpose of the recall? EON-236358	11/30/2015 17:40	Vets Dentastix Daily Oral care	On (b) (6), my dog (b) (6) died at the vets. He had been under medical treatment for a couple of weeks. I had begun giving (b) (6) Pedigree Dentastix and he had them for a period of three weeks. Initially I noticed that he drank more water after eating them but thought not a lot of it. I stopped giving them after three weeks because he appeared to be in discomfort after eating them and had begun drinking excessively. Also he developed diarrhea after having one by itself in the afternoon. He initially stopped drinking excessively after I stopped them, but he was urinating too much and having long wees. I spoke to my vet and he asked for a urine sample. The urine sample suggested he had developed Pancreatitis. (b) (6) was under veterinary medical assistance from that time until he died. The vet believes the Pancreatitis caused diabetes. However, my dog succumbed and died on (b) (6) at the vets. He had collapsed the previous evening and was on a drip all night, but the vet on duty said he had gone into kidney failure. I looked on the internet to see if there were any product complaints for Pedigree Dentastix. I saw that there were many, many, complaints. Around the week my dog developed Pancreatitis, two dogs in America, each of different breeds to mine and each other, also developed Pancreatitis after eating Pedigree Dentastix and the owner put a complaint in the Pedigree (I think) forum. I phone Pedigree in the UK tel: 08000133131. I made a formal complaint and spoke to a woman called, 'Louise' a couple of times then I spoke to her line manager 'Richard'. They did say they would check that batch for problems and came back to me and said there were no problems. I told them I had seen many, many complaints on the internet about their product, but they were not concerned. I told them (b) (6) had died. They sent me a £10.00 voucher - do you think I care for a £10.00 voucher? My beloved dog who was in excellent health is dead. I am devastated and distraught. I asked for a product ingredient list. They refused to give me one saying it was a	7	Years	Dog	Retriever - Golden	57	Kilogram

			'competitors secret'. I am sure that you must have access to the ingredient list. I have informed myself and have now seen an ingredient list - whether it is accurate or not I cannot say. I cannot prove that Pedigree Dentastix killed my dog but he was fighting fit before having them. You can ask anyone you like at all in my area where I walked my dog every single morning and they will tell you what a fit and active dog he was. Correct me if I am wrong, but I understand that the product contains extract of decaffeinated green tea and also contains Eucalyptus oil. My understanding after attempting to inform myself is that there are side effects for dogs from ingesting decaffeinated green tea extract - namely that of vomiting and diarrhea. You will see from the many, many internet complaints that consumers have complained their dogs have vomited or had diarrhea after eating Pedigree Dentastix. The fact that Decaffeinated green tea extract is not labelled on the product means that consumers are not able to identify which ingredient has made their dog ill. I also understand that Eucalyptus Oil should not be ingested by dogs as it is toxic. I also understand, after attempting to inform myself that tripolyphosphate - the active ingredient, is listed as a possible neurotoxin in the US. I may be wrong on all of this, but this is the information I have gathered after attempting to inform myself. 'Richard' from Pedigree acknowledges, without my prompting, that some dogs are sensitive to these ingredients. My dog was clearly sensitive because he died. I would like the FDA to investigate on my behalf. Now I also understand (from information I have read and from Richard of Pedigree) that under the jurisdiction of the FDA, Pedigree are not required to list the additional ingredients of green tea extract and Eucalyptus Oil. I would not have allowed my dog to ingest anything which is known to be harmful to animals or to have side effects. I understand that the argument may well be that for the volume of product sold, you could argue that the percentage of dogs that vomit get diarrhea or die is

you could argue that the percentage of dogs that vomit, get diarrhea or die, is small. There should be at least a warning label on the product and ALL the ingredients listed so that the consumer can make an informed choice. I did not make an informed choice, I am writing with hindsight, which as you know is an incredible tool.

Richard from Pedigree was not forthcoming with any information and I said I understand they are watching their backs. He says the sample they tested showed no problems. But it is a problem, when there is a scientifically known side effect of Eucalyptus Oil, of extract of decaffeinated green tea extract and that Tripolyphosphate is listed in the US as a possible neurotoxin.

Now I also attempted to inform myself of grains, and I read an article that said there was a high number of toxic grains in the US last year and that manufacturers mixed them with other grains in an effort to diffuse the toxicity. I questioned Pedigree about that too. They were not forthcoming on where the grain came from. They insisted that the two dogs in the US who went down with Pancreatitis around the same time that my dog did was for a different reason. My dog was neither unfit, or fed poorly. He was raised on Royal Canin dried food. Initially for puppy, then junior, then adult (Golden retriever). I understand Royal Canin is a sister company of Pedigree.

Something has gone horribly wrong. Fit healthy dogs do not die or become unwell for no reason. You can see my dog's medical records and you will see that he was seen by the vet once a year for inoculation and check up and there is nothing on his medical records. He was perfectly fit and well, until I began the Pedigree Dentastix.

The point is this, if my dog was the only dog that was affected and I saw no instances of anyone else's dog becoming unwell, I might consider he became unwell through a different route.

--	--	--	--	--	--

However, there are many, many, many, complaints about Pedigree Dentastix, from the UK, the US and various countries around the world.

The range of complaints of symptoms is extremely small. Vomiting, diarrhea and death. There are so many complaints from consumers of dogs of different breed, ages, sizes, etc. etc.

I have even investigated and attempted to inform myself of the breeds that are prone to pancreatitis or diabetes. My dog does not fall under those breeds, nor does he fall in any of the categories for a disposition or pre-disposition for pancreatitis or diabetes.

I am respectfully requesting that the FDA look into this with all seriousness. If my dog falls into the category of dogs which just happen to be sensitive to the unlisted ingredients - there should be a warning label on the packet.

I am requesting that Pedigree pay my vets bill of £479.57 plus £1000.00 which is the cost of another quality Golden Retriever dog purchased in the UK from the same quality breeders.

Never in my wildest dreams would I have allowed my dog to ingest anything I believed or knew to have any sensitivity issues. I will regret for the rest of my life allowing my dog to have Pedigree Dentastix. Saying 'sorry' is of no help to me.

I have put the (b) (6) as the date the problem started. That is because this field has problems this evening and it wouldn't let me put anything else. I would have to calculate accurately when it began but it was in (b) (6). I would need to check.

I am not looking for platitudes, or too bad or we don't have to words. I am trying to understand the connection, between Pedigree Dentastix and my dog's death. When I phoned to report this i was laughed at and kept being told it was animal hair, I was familiar with these issues before but im not an idiot. i pulled it out and took pictures of it and even stuck it to a magnet. the company has done nothing to fix it. I think the product should be recalled or atleast the lot number.

EON-234467	11/19/2015 9:41	PetGuard Premium Cat & Kitten Dry Food	Emily, the Petguard representative who has all of the company's nutritional information, stated that their Premium Cat and Kitten dry food contains 0.026% magnesium based on a typical nutrient analysis (dry matter basis). This is below the minimum amount of 0.04% set for this nutrient by the AAFCO for feline adult maintenance (and below the minimum of 0.08% for growth and reproduction - this food is also labelled for kittens); therefore, this food is nutritionally incomplete and cannot carry the AAFCO's statement that it is "complete and balanced". There is also an issue with the phosphorous levels in five of their canned cat foods. The following 5 varieties have phosphorous levels below the AAFCO minimum of 0.5% for adult maintenance (based on a typical nutrient analysis on a dry matter basis). These foods are also therefore nutritionally incomplete and cannot carry the AAFCO's statement that they are "complete and balanced". Organic Chicken and Vegetable 0.198% Venison & Rice 0.187% Lite Chicken Stew 0.215% Lite Turkey & Barley 0.227% Beef & Barley 0.2235% These foods should be recalled, as they are labeled as being complete and balanced, but they are lacking in necessary nutrient levels established by the AAFCO for feline health. TikiCat chicken canned cat food was having black spots in it. I eventually learned that this was caused by a change in formulation. I persistently asked about the changes, in part, as I had seen no ingredient changes as listed on the label. The company finally informed me that the product labels do not match the formula changes. ---This seems wrong to have food out their with incorrect ingredients listed. Here is a quote from an email the company sent me on 10/27/15: "We use copper amino acid chelate in the diets, and I apologize that we have not updated the packaging." I asked if they had intent to recall the incorrectly labeled food, and was told, no. I have stopped feeding their food per the black spots I complained to you about in October and per clumps of white powdery substance. --I used to have the greatest trust and faith in this food. No more. I have two cans of the food if you are interested. I don't know if this will even be investigated. No harm came that I can see, but it seems wrong that ingredients on a label do not accurately reflect what is inside the can. It makes me wonder where else this company shirks rules.

EON-233670	11/12/2015 22:12	KMR Kitten Milk Replacer	Hi, I have been a foster for (b) (6) in (b) (6) for 7 Years and have fostered hundreds of kittens. I have concerns relative to our experiences with KMR and the large amount of diarrhea and mortality we have experienced with our bottle feeder kittens. I have been using KMR since 2010 for my bottle babies. I have had trouble since 2010 with Chronic diarrhea and some deaths but at the time we didn't think there was a correlation to the Milk Replacer. It wasn't until July 2015 when we switched manufacturers that we realized that KMR was causing these issues. Some of the problems that I have witnessed include low kitten weight and a struggle to get them to gain weight. They required constant extreme supportive care to keep them from dehydrating and dying including having to administer Sub-q fluids and sometimes antibiotics I have seen fecal scalding, clostridium overgrowth, and uncontrollable diarrhea. We were also consistently seeing a change in the color, odor and consistency of the poop.. All of the poop turned to a liquidy consistency and had a consistent color of yellowish/green in almost all of the kittens. There was also a very strong sour odor to the poop, like sulphur or rotting milk. Once we switched to the Breeders Edge brand, we never saw that color or consistency again. Kittens were wormed, and treated for common parasites. Diarrhea would start routinely on the 5th or 6th day. Most did survive, however 3 did die. We have switched to Breeder's Edge Feline Milk Replacer, and have had overnight success in getting bottle kittens back on track. We were careful to follow manufacturer's directions in handling and administering the KMR. All unopened cans were stored in a cool dry place. Opened cans were dated and stored per manufacturer's direction, and stored in freezers until reconstituted/mix. Reconstituted formula was refrigerated and any unused formula was discarded after 24 hours. Kittens were treated for common parasites and bathed daily. Here are a few of the kittens that I have experienced the above issues with...	2	Weeks	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	8	Ounce

			The general public who is using your product does not have the resources and experience that comes with bottle feeding on a regular basis. Unfortunately many vets are not a lot of help either when it comes to neonatal kittens and it saddens me that customers buy this product to raise a kitten that they found, they get diarrhea and the customer has no idea what to do and the kitten suffers and possibly dies as a result. I do have an open can that was opened June 2015. It has been stored in my freezer since then. I also have about 8 unopened cans in our storage unit that I am afraid to use or distribute to other fosters. The numbers on the open can are: H1054K #10 10:34 1274, Best by April 2016 The vet listed saw (b) (6) and (b) (6) in October 2014. He seemed better within a couple days and after he was done with his meds we put him back on Blue Buffalo. Within a couple days he had another bout of bloody diarrhea. I went online and started to research what could be wrong with him. The vet bill came to $500 and we really couldn't afford to take him back in for them just to tell us the same thing. The following day I scooped food from the container into her bowl and I noticed two of the rodent pellets. I had already feed my other dog. I stopped and put her bowl on the side. I checked the area where I stored the food to see if it was damaged, no damage. I scooped through the food in the container and saw more pellets though out the food. I pulled the bag out of the trash and checked for holes and there were none. I then contacted the manufacturer. The gave me an email to send pictures to and asked for the information from the bag. I took both doges to the vet to be checked out. My female dog had diarrhea and wasn't eating. The vet examined the feces from the dog food and determined it did appear to be rodent feces. The Stella and Chewy's was given to my handler by another client. One of the toy poodles was taken to the vet that morning with explosive diarrhea and projectile vomiting, and was kept at the clinic on IV fluids and given multiple medications to combat the vomiting, etc. She was not released to go home until (b) (6) (b) (6). The afternoon of the (b) (6) my boy, (b) (6), started the same thing, and was taken to the vet. The same regiment was applied, and he was released to go home on (b) (6). One other poodle ate the food and immediately vomited it up, and did not get sick like the others. Two other poodles ate the food and got diarrhea, but never started the vomiting, so the vet sent them home with medications. One other poodle was pregnant, and the medications given to her were limited due to the pregnancy. She aborted the puppies as a result. The vet ran parvo tests, multiple blood tests, and has determined that it was the food. We contacted Stella & Chewy's to report the problem, and they told us they would not test an opened bag because it could've gotten tainted from other exposures. They wanted to know the lot number, which I would not give them until I had unopened bags with the same lot number in my possession. I now have three unopened bags of the same lot number that made the dogs sick by contacting chewys.com, where the client of (b) (6) had ordered the food. The lot number of the bag the dogs ate was 239-15. Since the F&DA has tested Stella & Chewy's in the past and noted listeria, thus causing a voluntary recall, we suspect that is what made our dogs sick, as well. The vet is in (b) (6) and is very willing to cooperate and give you all the information you need. It does not make sense to us that these dogs would all come down instantly sick within hours of eating this food (the only thing different from normal for them) and it not be something in the food. We would like it tested so that we can present the astronomical vet bills to Stella & Chewy's and have this lot, and any others, recalled so no other animals get sick.	1	Years	Dog	Poodle - Toy	5	Pound
EON-232357	11/5/2015 9:48	Blue Buffalo Homestyle Recipe Chicken Dinner with Garden Vegetables & Brown Rice	I purchased the Blue Buffalo Chicken with Garden Vegetables as I have done on many occasions, as this is the regular food my dog eats, and he became very ill. He was vomiting and had diarrhea. I thought maybe he might have eaten something he wasn't supposed to so I waited a couple days for his stomach to recover. When it did I fed him the same food, from the same can, and he had the exact same reaction. I then threw the can out, thinking it was that specific can. Weeks passed; and I went to the same store and again purchased the same product. After eating, he again experienced the same reaction of vomiting and diarrhea w/ blood. I am now convinced that something is wrong with the food, because as I stated before, this was not a new food for him. My dog has been eating this food for over 2 years and it's only now that he is experiencing these reactions.	4	Years	Dog	Terrier - Yorkshire	6	Pound

(She was completely normal the entire day and night). When she came in, just as we always did, we gave her a treat. This time the treat happened to be a Pupperoni Mix Stick (with sweet potato). She had eaten these before with no problem and loved them and was always excited when I would give her one. She ate it quickly as usual and then we went to bed. About an hour later, she started vomiting and she vomited off and on all night long. It was a Saturday night so our vet was not open on Sunday. I thought maybe she just had an upset stomach but the vomiting would not stop. I got her to the vet right away Monday morning and he checked her blood to find her liver enzyme levels were so high they were above the chart they have. Her white blood cell count was also high. He immediately started giving her fluids and antibiotics but she did not improve throughout the day and could barely even lift her head. She died Tuesday afternoon, (b) (6).	8	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	7	Pound
EON-232303	11/5/2015 1:36	KMR® Powder for Kittens & Cats	I have contacted PETAG regarding our rescue groups experiences with KMR and the large amount of diarrhea and mortality we were experiencing with our bottle feeder kittens. This includes low kitten weight, fecal scalding, clostridium overgrowth, and uncontrollable diarrhea. Kittens were wormed, and treated for common parasites. Diarrhea would start routinely on the 5th or 6th day. Continuous SubQ fluids and antibiotics were administered to keep the kittens going. Most did survive, however 6 did die. In July 2014 we started experiencing severe issues with bottle baby kittens, this continued until July 2015 until we switched to Breeder's Edge Feline Milk Replacer, and have had overnight success in getting bottle kittens back on track. Another large foster group for a local shelter has also discontinued use of KMR by PetAg. I have contacted two reps from PetAG directly regarding the significant issue with their product and requested that they look into the issue. Some contain inaccurate Guaranteed Analysis, some contain the wrong ingredients, and I know for a fact they sell The Kitty Posh Salmon flavor with the chicken flavor actually inside instead of the Salmon as advertised. It is typically a clear or light amber color and I have been purchasing this product for more than 5 years. I called the company to ask about the discoloration and to determine if there are any quality assurance issues with the product. My concern is that I am giving it to my dog because of hip dysplasia and was informed by my vet that this product would help ease his discomfort. The response from the company was that the discoloration was caused by oxidation. I asked if they conducted any testing to assure the quality and integrity of the ingredients. The response was that they do not need to because it is not a regulated product. They further said that products that are oxidized do not pose any health problems. The person would not provide a name nor would he provide anybody with a science background to discuss this. I am concerned about 2 issues: 1) oxidized food/products may cause inflammation and that is the problem I am trying to alleviate, and 2) their response that they do not need to assure the quality of their product does not appear to be appropriate, particularly if the product may pose a health risk. I purchase the liquid product made by this company because it appears to help and there does not appear to be any other comparable supplement for dogs. I would appreciate a response as to what can be done regarding the quality of this company's product. Thank you.

EON-232032	11/3/2015 8:52	Taste of the Wild Dry Dog Food High Prairie Canine Formula with Roasted Bison and Venison; Taste of the Wild Sierra Mountain with Roasted Lamb Dry Dog Food	On 10/5/15 I purchased a 30lb bag of "Taste of the Wild-Bison/Venison" dog food from (b) (6) in (b) (6) I fed it to my 75 lb spayed female dog, (b) (6) that night and the following morning on 10/6/15. Upon returning home from work on 10/6/15, I found 8 piles of explosive diarrhea all over the house. (b) (6) is 5 years old and has never had diarrhea, especially in the house. To my knowledge she did not consume anything out of the ordinary. For the remainder of the evening on 10/6/15, I withheld all food and she continued to have diarrhea for the next 8 hours. I have been feeding (b) (6) "Taste of the Wild" brand food for a few years now. Throughout the years she has consumed all of the different flavors which include: Bison/Venison, Salmon, Lamb, and Wild Fowl. She has never had any previous digestive or allergic symptoms to "Taste of the Wild" or any other dog food brand. Kalli is generally healthy and has recently been to the vet for an annual checkup and has updated vaccinations. On 10/6/15, I returned to Pet Supplies Plus and exchanged the "Taste of the Wild Bison/Venison" food for "Taste of the Wild-Salmon". I did not feed her the new food however. She did not eat anything until I fed her a bland rice and chicken diet on the night of 10/7/15. After which she did not have any reoccurring diarrhea or upset stomach symptoms. I slowly introduced the "Taste of the Wild-Salmon" on 10/9/15 and she has been eating it since without any apparent digestive issues. On 10/18/15 my roommate purchased a 30lb bag of "Taste of the Wild- Lamb" from (b) (6) in (b) (6) for his 4 year old 75lb dog (b) (6). (b) (6) has been eating "Taste of the Wild" dog food for a few years as well. ----------------------------	----------------	---	---	---	-------	-----	---------------------------	----	-------

			my roommate read (b) (6) the "Taste of the Wild-Lamb" in the evening of 10/19/15. At 4am on 10/20/15 (b) (6) was whimpering and begging to go outside (3 hours before he typically goes out) and he remained outside for about 15 minutes. Upon returning to his bed he began slight whimpering, but eventually went back to sleep. My roommate let him outside to relieve himself again at 7am, at which time we were unaware any issues he was having. When I returned home from work on 10/20/15 around 5pm, there were 6 explosive puddles of diarrhea all over the house again, but this time it was apparent that (b) (6) was the culprit. In addition to having severe diarrhea, (b) (6) also experienced vomiting from the food. (b) (6) continued to have diarrhea for the next few hours and was slightly lethargic for the remainder of the night. It is apparent that something in this food has caused the dogs to have severe diarrhea and vomiting. (b) (6) only had one serving (1-1.5 cups) of the food, while (b) (6) had two servings (1 cup each). Yet both dogs experienced identical symptoms within 8-12 hours of consuming a mere 1-2 servings. These are two different dogs, two different flavors, and two different weeks, but the brand of dog food and the location that it was purchased from remains the same. I called the "Taste of the Wild" customer service number located on the back of the dog food and made them aware of these incidents on 10/20/15. The representative unapologetically informed me that there weren't any known problems with the food and did not offer any resolution. I informed her that these separate but identical occurrences couldn't be pure coincidence. This is to serve as an official complaint against "Taste of the Wild" dog food. We would like for them to be aware of this issue, investigate it and remove the food before it causes severe damage to another dog. The UPC for "Taste of the Wild-Bison/Venison" is 7419860964. I did not record the production number or expiration date of that bag. "Taste of the Wild- Lamb" had an expiration of 6/13/2016 and the production code is TDS053A2M. Location of Purchase: Pet Supplies Plus # (b) (6) (b) (6)

My other dog, (b) (6), did chew on one of the bones after (b) (6) had greatly diminished it, but has not showed any adverse affects. On the evening of Friday 10-23-15, (b) (6) was incontinent in the house, then needed to go outside with increased frequency. As it was the weekend, I began giving him Nutri-Vet Bladder Control urinary supplements and that seemed to help. On the morning of Sunday 10-25-15, I found that my other dog (b) (6) was incontinent in her crate during the night. I took her out and she urinated several times. 15 minutes later she indicated she needed to go out again. This time I inspected the urine stream and observed it was red with blood. I immediately made an appointment at a vet on Sunday 10-25-15 for both (b) (6) and (b) (6). EON-231094	10/26/2015 15:44	IAMS ProActive Health Optimal Weight with Chicken	I gave my cat Iams dry food for the first time ever having Iams- a healthy weight formula. The next day I found throw up on the floor. The morning after that, I found more throw up on the floor. She consumed it 2-3 times by then. She wouldn't move and she had clear stuff coming out of her anus. She wouldn't eat or drink. We immediately took her to the vet and she was rehydrated, had blood test taken, and had a very high fever. She was given antibiotics and hooked up to an iv, and two days later she died. The vet did an exploratory surgery after her death only to find normal results. She said that she expects that it was a toxin that killed her, and beings that it was a food she had never been on before, I'm thinking that I need to have the food tested. I do not have the bag from the food, but I do have a whole container of the food still. I bought it from Target.	1	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	12	Pound
EON-230930	10/25/2015 15:20	Purina Pro Plan True Nature Natural Ocean Whitefish & Trout Entree	I am owner of 1 cat... other owner is acquaintance that lives in a different state. Gave cat a rounded tablespoon of the food from new can about 5:30 pm on Friday. About 12:15 am she suddenly vomited without any warning or noise as she usually does. When we woke up at 6:30 we found little bits of sticky stool throughout the house, in all 6 rooms, some with a wet spots around it on carpet. Same little bits of sticky stool were seen in litter box, with a puddle of mucus almost clear stool that was beginning to dry around edges (so it probably had been there for 3-4 hours). We went to cat to find her with very slow shallow breathing, no movement of her body at all and only a bit of movement of her head. We pet her and sat with her for about 30 minutes then took another hour to clean house while she remained with almost no movement on the chair. After another hour or so we coaxed her down to try to get her to her water dish when we found dry, mucousy fecal matter over her entire back end, on her haunches and down to her feet. She had no strength to struggle as we cleaned her. We noticed her eyes were fully dialated and would not close with light - just blinking and closing eyes because the light was too strong for her. She was listless and slept on one chair for next 10 hours or so. At 5:30 we fed her about a teaspoon of jarred baby food, chicken with broth. She ate that fine, still no water. About 9 p.m. we got her to take a bit of water.	15	Years	Cat	Domestic Shorthair	11	Pound

They were hungry and would sit in front of the refrigerator and meow like they were hungry but would not touch another bite of that food. EON-230723	10/22/2015 19:56	Priority Total Pet Care Chicken Breast Jerky	The dog was initially seen at an emergency clinic on 10/5/15 for vomiting, inappetence, and lethargy. Bloodwork was run and the only abnormality seen was a mildly high liver value (ALT=541, normal = 10-118). He was given an anti-nausea medication and famotidine and sent home with the owner. Then next day (10/6) he presented at our veterinary clinic for continued inappetence and lethargy. At this time, the owner reported that the only thing she could think of that might have led to the clinical signs was that she opened a new package of chicken breast jerky three days earlier and fed them to the dog - the clinical signs started later that same day. He was given fluids subcutaneously and was continued on the anti-nausea medication and famotidine. The owner and patient returned the next day (10/7), and the owner noted that the patient still wasn't eating and was getting more lethargic. Bloodwork was run and it was discovered that his liver values had risen dramatically, with the ALP >2400 (normal = 20-150), and ALT > 2000. These values were so high that they could not be reliably measured on our in-house blood analyzers, so bloodwork was sent out to a lab to test the liver values, bile acid levels, and a spec CPL to check for possible pancreatitis. The patient was hospitalized at our clinic the next morning and started on IV fluids. Bloodwork from the lab indicated an ALP of 5951, an ALT of 2482, and a bile acid value of 183 (normal = 0 to 6.9). This confirmed a diagnosis of acute hepatitis. The patient was kept hospitalized and on IV fluids and antibiotics for 4 days. He was released to the owner on day 5 after starting to eat and drink on his own. A blood test to rule out leptospirosis was also run and came back negative. The patient is still recovering at home, where he is gradually improving daily. Subsequent bloodwork has shown that the liver values are now decreasing, but are still markedly higher than normal.	4	Years	Dog	Chihuahua	12	Pound

EON-230599	10/21/2015 17:48	Pedigree complete Nutrition for Adults	On October 6th, I had to take my dog to the vet because she didn't eat for 2 days, she threw up and drank excessive amounts of water, and diarrhea. She was lethargic and couldn't barely move. After taking her to the Vet they took some blood and tested everything they could. They also took x rays of her lower abdomen since there was swelling in that area. My dogs stomach looked like it ate a big balloon. Her blood count was very high, her kidney count was high, and liver as well. The doctor treated her with Amoxicillin for the infection and went home. She felt "ok" for 2 days then she went back to normal. She still hadn't eaten though. This time she threw up and laid in it because she couldn't move. I practically had to carry her into the Vets office. They ran more test and took more blood work. The infection was still there, and her blood count was still very high. They kept her that day and filled her body full of fluids to see how her body would react. They also injected her with something to see if she would start responding faster. The vet said she didn't respond like he had hoped. He sent us home for the night, so she wouldn't be more stressed out. I had to bring her back the next morning to put an I vey back in her for more fluids. She was on fluids all day long. I picked her up and she was doing slightly better, but not herself still. I had to take her back the following day for more blood work to check her levels of everything after all that fluids hoping it would flush out whatever toxins were in there. Her kidney count and liver was back to normal but still showed signs of infection in the kidneys. I had to take her back a day later to have her cathrier taken out. We got stronger medicine, along with vitamins to give to her since she hasn't been able to eat her dog food, and poopy pills. Everyday I have had to boil chicken and rice for her to eat. A little history on my dog....She is up to date on all shots, doesn't eat human food, doesn't get into garbage, only goes outside when I am out there, we have no standing water for her to drink from, she is on heart guard and flea medicine. There is nothing she would have or could have gotten into in our home. Having my dog is like having another child. That is the way she is treated! There are hair like particles on the dogs food. This is not normal. I have fed my dog this food for years without any problems, until now. I know they changed their food and something is making them sick and some are dying. I have a whole bag of dog food with this hair like stuff hanging out of it. I did and do not keep the bags because I pour it all into a huge container. I had just bought a new back about 2-3 weeks before she began getting sick. I have spent close to $1000 now and still anticipating more. If my dog dies this will not be good. I know there are others out there going through what I am and have also filled out these forms as well. I want to know what is being done about it. I have called pedigree and voiced my concerns. They just ask questions and never once apologized. They still insist on this hair like particles are normal. I did give them the information they needed to contact my Vet. EON-230449	10/21/2015 1:04	Milk Bones Large Dog Biscuits	My dog has been having diarrhea, I'm not sure the exact cause. Today, however, I discovered an infestation of his milk-bones large bisquits. I keep some in a jar and the rest in the big box. I saw a bug in the jar and noticed some weird holes on the bones. These are the same signs that led me to discover a previous bug infestation of (can you guess?) milk bones. The last infestation was a different bug, they looked like moths. This infestation is some sort of beetle. Discovery of each infestation respectively occured simultaneously with my dogs diarrhea. Of course I won't be purchasing milk bones any more, but I'm extremely concerned about this because a simple google search turns up hundreds of posts proclaiming the same two types of bug infestations of milk bones dating back to 2008. I sent in a complaint via the 'contact us' link on milkbone.com saying something to the effect of "a simple google search turns up hundreds of photos of the same infestations so you must be aware of this reoccurring problem, continuing to sell an infested product, knowing it's infested, is willfully negligent. I think if you cannot make a product that will not hatch into an intrusive infestation requiring the disposal of my entire pantry, then you should not be able to sell milkbones at all. At least not without a warning to your customers that your dog treats come with a side of bugs."	5	Years	Dog	Retriever - Labrador

He ate it several days in a row and then slowly lost his appetite over the next few days until he wouldn't eat at all, had diarrhea, started vomiting and become very lethargic. We took him to our vet, they ran tests and diagnosed him with kidney failure and a severe infection (his urine was filled with bacteria). He was immediately hospitalized and remained there for the next 5 days, getting IV fluids and antibiotics. His kidney levels have recovered some since he was initially hospitalized but it appears he has permanent damage with only 25% kidney function. Our vet said that tainted food could cause an issue like this but we didn't think anything of that until our other dog ... a perfectly healthy 4-year old yorkie mix tried the "Dogs in the Kitchen - Fowl Ball" made by Weruva food for the first time and proceeded to projectile vomit 7 times over 2 hours immediately following consumption.	10	Months	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	5.8	Pound

(box identifier 1113200392) Purchsed from Menards in (b) (6) Fed my dog on average 3-4 treats a day, for approximately 10 days. She is a very active and highly exercised dog who gets a treat after each walk/run/play. Noticed she began throwing up minimally every other day and had constant diarrhea. Energy level remained the same. Nothing else changed in her diet or routine. Have fed her Holistic Select since she was a puppy. No change in main food nor was a new bag opened during this displayed health issue. Only thing that changed was providing her with this new box of treats. Eliminated treats and diarrhea on the weekend of October 10/11th and throwing up was totally discontinued immediately.	9	Years	Dog	Brittany	35	Pound

EON-229659	10/15/2015 20:56	Zach's Quality Dog Food Black Label Performance	To Whom It May Concern: I live in (b) (6) and raise sled dogs. (b) (6) is a community of about 3500 year around residents. The only way to reach (b) (6) is by air, except possibly boat through the (b) (6) from June through October each year when the sea is not frozen. Each year a group of us, mostly sled dog owners, put together an order of dog food for the year. The dog food is shipped to us by barge arriving in container vans from Seattle, WA. For the past 3 years, we have ordered Zach's Quality Dog Food and, until this year, we have been very satisfied with the quality. The plant that makes the dog food is: Pioneer Naturals Pet Foods in Hamlin, Texas (phone (b) (6)). The operations manager is Dwayne Hunter. This year we (Dog Owners of (b) (6)) ordered 640, 50 # bags of Zach's Quality Dog Food or 32000 pounds. There were 514 bags of Zach's Black Label Performance and 126 bags of Zach's Chicken and Rice. After the barge arrived in September 2015, I began feeding the Black Label Performance to my sled dogs (I have 30). I notice immediately that something was not right. I have been feeding the exact food since 2013 and could tell instantly that the new shipment was different. When I opened the bag, I did not smell "chicken soup" as I have always referred to in the past. There was really no smell, but maybe a chemical like smell. My dogs did not seem to want to eat the food. The stools were very large and had the consistency of saw dust. The number of stools per day practically doubled and many of them began to have diarrhea / loose stools. On 09/28/1015, I sent a text message to the Daniel, the owner of Zach's Dog Food, asking if anything had changed with the dog food and he stated that the dog food should be the same and that neither the ingredients nor the nutritional profile had changed. I sent pictures of the actual food to Daniel because the kibble seemed to have a lighter appearance when compared to the food from the 2014 order. I also sent pictures of the stools to show the saw dust like appearance. He sent the pictures to the plant operation manager, Dwayne Hunter (Pioneer Naturals Pet Foods), and I received a forwarded text on 10/02/2015 from Daniel saying "I'm sorry, I can't help you. I'll let Dwayne know."			Dog	Unknown

			10/06/2015 from Daniel message from the Operations Manager, Dwayne Hunter, replying that he "looked back" and both the Black Label and the Chicken and Rice dog food had correct protein levels. He also stated that they are "all natural company" which is why the dog food shows different colors of kibble. He advised me not to "free feed" (which I do not) and feed according to the labels on the bag. I asked them to send me analysis of the food. They asked me to send 2 samples of food with a picture of the date stamp. I have done that but have not heard from them if they received the samples. I did, however, send samples of both the Black Label Performance and the Chicken and Rice Formulas on my own to (b) (6) (b) (6) in (b) (6) I utilized the services of (b) (6) because, prior to our group purchasing the food for the first time in 2013, I had asked for a 3rd party nutritional analysis of the dog food. The report I received in 2013 from (b) (6) and the analysis was positive as it matched the nutritional analysis advertised on the bag of food. However, I just received the analysis back from the 2015 order samples that were received by (b) (6) on October 12, 2015. The dog food analysis of the Black Label Performance does not match the advertised "guaranteed analysis" on the bags of dog food. I have attached a copy of the analysis completed on 06/21/2013 and the analysis completed on 10/14/2015. This is completely unacceptable. I should note that the analysis of the Chicken and Rice Formula was acceptable. We are in full training right now and it is not fair to the dogs to expect them to be at top performance when they are only receiving 23% protein because the protein levels we were supposed to have received is supposed to be at least 29%. We have been training like we are feeding a much higher protein, not knowing the difference until this analysis was completed. Not only was the protein diminished significantly, the calories per gram "as received" were almost 400 less (4940 cal/g vs. 4570 cal/g) than the previous sample in 2013. The fiber almost tripled and the ash content doubled. This is not good! The dogs build muscle and endurance on protein, not plant matter and bone. The dog owners in (b) (6) have put a lot of money into buying and breeding top caliber dogs and are "thinking" they are feeding quality food for our top dog athletes. EON-229521	10/14/2015 20:04	Purina products	Numerous dogs have been sickened or died from eating commercially available dry dog food. An extensive evaluation of the root cause of these deaths and illnesses has led to the conclusion that numerous commercially available dry dog foods are contaminated with endotoxins, these toxins are lipopolysaccharides that are released when Gram negative bacteria are lysed (Killed) during the thermal process of rendering. This condition has been reported in a 2004 USDA publication which stated that while the bacteria are killed in the rendering process, the endotoxins remain and these toxins can cause illness and the pet food manufacturers do not test for endotoxins. FDA has a responsibility to provide a safe upper limit for endotoxins in dog food because when carcasses in advanced stages of putrefaction are rendered, unacceptably high levels of endotoxins will be released into the by products that are used as ingredients in the animal food.	6	Years	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	40	Pound

She was diagnosed as obese and put on a diet of 1/4th cup twice daily, of Science Diet Light. She had been fed the Original Science Diet while at (b) (6) for approximately three months before I adopted her, then switched to DS Light on the vet's recommendation. On August 8, I purchased three 4 lb. bags that were on sale at the Pet Smart on (b) (6) and put them in my freezer until needed. On (b) (6), I opened one of these bags and gave my cat 1/4th cup. Within a short time, less than 2 hours (I left the house to run an errand), she vomited then entire meal and refused to eat the rest of the day. I thought she would come around, but didn't worry too much because she was on a diet anyway. Her diet goal was to loose down to 11 lb. For the nexr three days, she appeared interested in eating, but actually consumed maybe a tablespoon or two at the most, but continued to drink water. By the (b) (6) I knew something was wrong and took to see (b) (6) (b) (6) at (b) (6). Her exam turned out to be pretty normal and the doctor gave her some antinausea medication. (b) (6) ate a little and again vomited and was lethargic. I spoke to the vet the next morning, the (b) (6) and she advised me to bring (b) (6) to the hospital to stay the day on an IV and other medications. She explained to me the conditions surrounding a diagnosis of pancreatitis. When I picked the cat up that evening, she was a little more active and ate about one ounce of a mini-can of Fancy Feast wet food. Her energy level deteriorated quickly and during the evening, she had two watery black stools, indicating blood in her intestinal tract and ?stomach?. I had to carry her upstairs She slept with me and did not move a muscle for more than 5 hours. I knew she was dying. She seemed to feel a bit better the next morning, but was still refusing to eat. I called (b) (6) and requested euthanasia for (b) (6) on that date. She is no longer suffering, but I am. I believe that the bad batch of Science Light was the result of poor quality control and that the effect was the death of a perfectly health, active cat that had become a beloved family member. I ended up returning some to the pet store and was given a refund. I emailed the company via their web site (Petropics) but did not get a reply. (This had happened with prior inquiries, as well.) I figured out by googling (an online poster said) that the company said that the problem was created by a new supplement mix wherein copper was interacting with sulfur to create black spots and the company also said that there was no reason for concern as it was a cosmetic issue. I contacted the company via phone and was told the issue would be resolved with a certain date code. I bought after that date code, and saw black spots. I fed some of it, but was still concerned about food safety. I contacted the company again (I had to google the company that acquired TikiCat, White Bridge Brands / Cloudstar as the TikiCat web site phone number (still up) was disconnected. I spoke to someone and emailed my questions (which remain unanswered after two weeks). She sent me some free food. I bought a big box of cans (64) and was dismayed to see black spots and white gunk. The white gunk was not normal --and looked like it might be too much supplement. The black spots are what I have been seeing since June 2015. I note that the supplement change correlates with the acquisition of the company. I also note that while they state the supplement mix has changed, they have not made labeling ingredient changes. I am uneasy with feeding this food. I would like to know that it is safe, as it is a food that my cat likes, and that historically, has been good for them. The company keeps putting me off. I would like answers. I returned the big box of food except for a can that I saved in case you would want it. Its best by date is Feb 2018. Food that the company sent me that looks normal is best by dated May 2018. A lot of the "old" black-spotted" food is still on pet store shelves. This kills me. There they did the ultrasound and found he had a critical gallbladder obstruction that was damaging his liver and he needed emergency surgery. The ultrasound doctor did not want to do the surgery because of the cost to us at $5,500+ but we requested to meet with the actual surgeon which we did for 2 hours. It was agreed that he had a 50/50 chance of survival through surgery and we were most definitely giving him the chance no matter the cost! He was kept overnight in ICU given fluids, pain meds, 2 types of antibiotics an warming bed to try and help regulate his body temperature in hopes of stabilizing for surgery in the morning. Updates through the night were that his body temp kept dropping. When his surgeon came in in the morning she says to have done a full blood panel that had significantly worsened overnight, blood pressure dropped, heart murmur was loud, pulmonary vessels affected and heart vessels affected adversely. He began going into cardiac failure. There was no choice but to euthanize at that point	14	Years	Dog	Poodle - Toy	6	Pound

EON-228668	10/8/2015 10:44	Blue Buffalo Blue Life Protection Formula Fish and Sweet Potato Recipe	(b) (6) was presented to the (b) (6) for further diagnostic work-up of lethargy, vomiting or regurgitation and excessive drooling. (b) (6) was normal prior to switching to her food from Blue Buffalo Salmon and potato to Blue Buffalo fish and sweet potatoe ~3 weeks prior. At that time she had a short self-limiting bout of diarrhea. Since that time the owners noticed that she had also been very lethargic and listless. Upon eating or being presented with food, (b) (6) hyper salivated and may chew the food and drop it onto the floor. She would also hyper salivate spontaneously, not associated with eating. Piles of undigested food were also found in the house. (b) (6) would eat small wet food meatballs (was given Purina EN by her veterinarian), but seemed to struggle to swallow them. She hyper salivated spontaneously and when she attempts to swallow. (b) (6) was presented to their regular veterinarian for these clinical signs. She watched (b) (6) try to eat food and noticed her having difficulty. Bloodwork was performed which indicated inflammation. (b) (6) was then referred you to the (b) (6) emergency service on (b) (6) after noticing possible dysphagia when (b) (6) was eating. On presentation to the (b) (6) (b) (6) was bright and alert with an elevated temperature at 103.4. She was spontaneously hyper salivating. A neurologic exam was unremarkable. Chest and abdominal x-rays were performed and were unremarkable. It was recommended that (b) (6) return today through the internal medicine service for further work-up. (b) (6) was presented to the (b) (6) for further evaluation of difficulty swallowing, excessive drooling and vomiting/regurgitation for 2 weeks. Her oral exam was largely unremarkable which made us concerned that the smell could be coming from her esophagus or stomach. (b) (6) was placed under general anesthesia for upper GI endoscopy. The esophagus was unremarkable. Multiple, markedly abnormal, large lesions were seen multifocally through the gastric mucosa. The lesions were "pock-like" in appearance with an area of central depression/ulceration/necrosis surrounded by proliferative tissue. The lesions were of varying sizes and appeared to be in different stages of maturity. Possible differentials for these findings could include an infectious etiology (bacterial, fungal, protozoal, parasitic), severe inflammation or neoplasia. The appearance of the stomach was very unusual so it was hard to know exactly what these lesions represented or how long they had been there. The small intestine was not affected by these lesions but the Peyer's patches in the duodenum appeared prominent and were biopsied. Several biopsies were also collected from the rest of the duodenum and stomach, including the lesions in various stages of maturity. The biopsies were submitted for histopathology and several gastric biopsies were also submitted for bacterial (aerobic and anaerobic) and fungal culture. The culture grew 4 colonies of pasteurella multocida which could represent a pathologic infection, opportunistic infection or normal flora. Histopathology showed evidence of Helicobacter pylori in the stomach (unknown significance-possibly just overgrowth) and moderate lymphocytic to lymphoplasmacytic gastroenteritis. No specific etiology of (b) (6) clinical findings were found. (b) (6) was treated with broad spectrum antibiotics (Clavamox and Enrofloxacin) and sucralfate. (b) (6) responded almost immediately to this treatment and within several days almost all her clinical signs had gone away. She is now acting completely normal but the plan is to continue to treat her for a total of 6 weeks.

I saw what I thought was a chunk of white bone in the food. Since she is a senior with some missing teeth, I removed the chunk. It was hard and the edges were sharp. I discovered that it was colored on the other side, a bluish color, and appears to be plastic. I have the can, food, and foreign object in my refrigerator. I also took photos. This happened Monday night. It was too late to call Whole Foods. Due to mobility limitations and illness, I cannot go to the corporate office. On Tuesday, I attempted to call Whole Foods main office. I got a recording and left a message. No one has called me back. The product code is UCCWC1 2349, best by May 21 18. EON-228421	10/6/2015 11:54	Hill's Science Diet Veterinarian Recommended Adult Grain Free - Precisely balanced nutrition suitable for cats with grain sensitivities.	(b) (6) died suddenly and unexpectedly. The only change that happened was his food which I purchased on (b) (6) . I changed to Science Diet Grain Free Formula for Cats, because he liked to eat dry food a lot and I wanted to get him a little leaner as he consumed the dry food carbs for much of his diet. He would be fed wet food 2 times a day that was either Royal Canin specialized canned formulas or Pro Plan canned. He died around 6:00 am in my arms in the car on the way to the emergency vet . We found him breathing labored on the floor of our hallway around 4:38 am. He still was able to walk and run from me as I was trying to see what the matter was. His eyes seemed to be properly focused but I could see he was very scared as to what was happening to him. He couldn't cry out and had a lot of saliva and was drooling. We immediately put him in a cat carrier and set off for the vet. As my husband was driving, he was crying in a strained way and trying to get out of the carrier. I somehow felt that this was really bad and I had never experienced this is the 22 yrs owning cats, so I held him and he seemed to get worse as we drove , gasping , trying to throw up and cry out. He passed about 3 mins before we got to the emergency vet. Since he was deceased upon arrival, the emergency vet only confirmed no sound of heartbeat and said that due to all the secretions that it looked (from little she could without autopsy) that it was a heart failure event. She asked me some questions and she suggested that it could have been a toxin in his food. I brought him home to our house to let the other cats say "goodbye" and then we drove him to our vet that we had for 10 yrs , (b) (6) in (b) (6) he was seen by (b) (6) there and had a good check up a year and half ago before we moved to the (b) (6) . He drank water, had good appetite , urinated and defecated regularly and normal and he played and ran and was active . He was fine up until the time that we discovered him. When we all went to sleep around Midnight. He was sleeping in his bed in the den where he always slept. I had him cremated as I do all my cats, then another cat became severely ill 4 days later and in hindsight wish I would have done a autopsy. I had no way of knowing that another cat would have to be rushed to the emergency vet and she survived as they kept her overnight and ran constant fluids and gave antibiotics . I am not sure how to report the rest of the cats scenarios. I have all the paperwork for of these vets and cost over $1200.00	6	Years	Cat	Unknown	20	Pound

The girl that handed me my food asked if my dog could have a bone to eat. I said sure, he loves to chew on them. She gave me 2 smoked pork bones. When we got home, I gave him one and he was licking them I heard the bone crack. After that, (b) (6) wanted to go outside. He didn't eat any more of the bone. I let him out for about 2 minutes and he came back inside. The next day, he laid around with me on the couch all day until time to take my Mother to dialysis treatment at 7 pm. He always rides with us. He was having a hard time breathing and put his head out the window. I left him for about 5 minutes in the car, with air running, while I ran into Ingles to get some dog food and treats. (b) (6) had threw up bile in my seat but move over to passenger seat to ride home. Again, he wanted window down. When we got home, he jumped out of the car and was trying to poop in front yard. I watched him for about 10 minutes, then he laid down in the grass. I came into the house to put bags up. Then he would not come back into house and was not in sight. After calling him for probably an hour, I got into vehicle and drove around looking for him in the industrial park in front of my house. I heard his bark once but never saw him. At 2 am, I pick my Mother up from her treatment. On the way home, we ride threw the industrial park again. Still nothing of him. Upon pulling into my driveway, there he was laying on his front paws in the front yard. I ran over to him but he didnt get up. He looked very distant. I petted him, came into house and opened front door and tried to get him inside house. He would not get up in front of me but after I came to kitchen, he came walking inside. He walked to his water bowl and drank 2 bowls of water. I put ice cubes in the 2nd bowl. Then he walked to my bedroom and laid down beside bed. He normally sleeps beside me on the bed but did not make an effort to get up on it. I brought his bed from living room and put beside bed and he crawled onto it. From 3am to 730am, he had moved into the bathroom and was laying beside toilet, he would drink from the toilet sometimes, flushed of course. I covered him with a towel and told him that we would go see the doctor when he opened. We both slept a while longer and he came into living room about 10 am, drank water from bowl in kitchen, took a small poop onto pad in hall (looked like maybe some mucus or small bone fragments in it), then laid with his head on hardwood floor with body on carpet. I covered him again and noticed his breathing was more rapid than normal. At this time, I ran to get clothes on, came back to him still laying in same place and position, his eyes were open but no movement, I cried for him to hold on so I could open door and lay him in the back. I was out the door for a few minutes, when I came back in, he was not breathing. He stopped breathing about 1038am Monday, (b) (6). EON-226615	9/27/2015 16:32	Whisked dry cat food 16 lb bag/ Whisked wet cat food in pouch 3.0 oz/ Temptation cat treats in pouch 3.0 oz	My cats began to vomit and began then one began to sleep a lot more. When she wasn't drinking or eating I took her to the vet and had blood test drawn she had elevated white blood cells and kidney damage. They ask me what kind of cat food she ate. I answered Whiskas wet cat food and dry and she also has temptation cat treats. The Vet commented that the brand I mentioned is known to have ingredients in it that cause crystalization in cats kidneys and to stop the use of that product immediately. He said that he was going to put her on IV fluids and antibiotics and try to restore back to health but that she was going into kidney failure. The vet hydrated and fed her baby food to get to try and eat. My cat was diagnosed with kidney disease. He said that this was a common problem he saw related to that cat food brand.	6	Years	Cat	Domestic Mediumhair	6	Pound

EON-226565	9/26/2015 3:24	Whiskas Temptations	Hello, Fortunately my cat has not had the many horrible symptoms that most other cats have had from eating Whiskas Temptations cat treats made by the Mars Company. I URGE YOU TO SPEND SOME TIME READING the Consumer Affairs pages where many MANY cat owners have provided detailed info on the issues that their cats have experienced (I wrote a review as well there) - http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/whiskas-cat-food.html There are over 6 pages with the same information about what these cat treats, Whiskas, have done to cats around the United States. My personal experience with them is that there is little doubt that the product contains some ingredient that is addictive to a cat. I have to believe the FDA would not allow any product to be created (for man or pet) that has a STRONGLY ADDICTIVE INGREDIENT (I'm not speaking of caffeine or tobacco products, but something much much stronger for a cat). At the very least, I would expect some kind of warning on a label (although I would absolutely fight to get this product off the shelves of any store that carries them). Like I was saying, my cat does not get sick or have issues with their liver and other organs, but they do have such an addictive quality that my cat will not eat anything else, but these treats and when I started to wean her off of these treats, the effects were absolutely horrifying and sad to see my cat having close attributes of what I expect a heroin addict to go through during withdraw. She would not move for a few days. She could not keep any food down (nor did she really try to eat any food). She would not drink water. And overall, she was so lethargic she seemed like a different cat I had know for the past 3 years of my life. I would stake ANYTHING on my claim that there is a very very major issue with this product and the pages on Consumer Affairs and I'm sure the inquiries you have received directly, must be enough to lead to some sort of investigation. If it is not, I would very much like to know what would make the FDA take the next step of taking a closer look at this product. I would be happy to lead any cause necessary to get this action started as I don't believe any pet owner should be exposed to such a harmful product that is sold at ANY store that sells cat food/treat products. For owners (and if a family, their young children) to go through seeing such agony and pain for their pet w/out anything they can do about it, is a very tough thing to go through because of the feeling of being so helpless. I truly hope you will reply letting myself know that you will be looking into this further or giving me direction as I can help move this to the next level. Kind Regards, (b) (6)	3	Years	Cat	Domestic (unspecified)	8	Pound

EON-226559	9/26/2015 1:48	Oberto All Natural Teriyaki Turkey Jerky	On (b) (6), our dog found a package of Oberto All Natural Teriyaki Turkey Jerky (that belonged to my husband) on the kitchen table and she consumed what was left in it (approximately 1/4 - 1/2 pkg.). She did NOT consume the little white packet in the package. We did not feed it to her. She found it in our kitchen table. Within an hour of eating it, she began vomiting and completely lost her appetite but had increased thirst for water. We took her to our vet who did X-rays to make sure that any packaging she may have swallowed was not causing a blockage. None of the X-rays showed any signs of obstruction. She was admitted to the emergency animal hospital and labs showed she had significant liver damage. Within 24 hours her bilirubin went from normal to 8.1. All her other labs were normal. But her liver was reacting like it would if she had been poisoned. One hour prior to her consuming this product she was healthy, energetic, ate normal and showed no signs of distress. She continued to get supportive care between the emergency vet and our regular vet and during the week would come home with us at night. My husband is a physician so he was able to administer IV fluids to her the second weekend. She fought very hard for 10 days and at times we thought she showed small signs she might recover. She was receiving IV fluids, a liver protectant pill, B12 injection, and Vitamin K1 daily during this time. X-rays were done on 3 occasions during this 10 day period and there was never an obstruction. Her liver enzyme labs continued to decline and her last labs on 9/19/15 showed a bilirubin of 16.5. Her primary symptoms besides the lab results were vomiting, incontinence, loss of appetite, build up of fluid in her abdomen and back legs. She began to rapidly decline and on (b) (6) we had to make the difficult decision to euthanize her. Two different vets confirmed that the jerky she consumed was the sole source of her sudden and significant liver damage and ultimately her death. This product says Made in USA, however we don't know if some of the ingredients may have been from China. She went from being a perfectly healthy frisky dog full of energy to suddenly seriously ill and died immediately after consuming this product. I personally feel there need to be warnings for all jerky (human and the pet variety and for all types - chicken, turkey and beef).	9	Years	Dog	Retriever - Golden	70	Pound

I purchased the first two bags from walmart on (b) (6) when brought our beautiful puppies home. They where thriving, happy, healthy. We went thru the first two bags quickly, i then went in july and purchased a large storage contained made for feed and seed from our lacial tractor supply co. And a larger bag of the purina puppy. Within a week (b) (6) started to vomit, i immediatly took him to our vet they started on anti nausea meds, and amoxicillan. The next day the vomitting stoped ,but he still refused to eat or drink, on the third day severe diahiarea had started, he became lathargic, and very quickly too weak to walk. We then rushed him to the closet animal emergency center. They ran numerous tests, eliminated many illnesses such as parvo, and others. His blood work came back, he was having kidney failure, but they couldnt understand why? The blood work was confusing even the vets. Throughout the day they continued to monitor him and flush him with IV fluids, antibiotics, anti nausea medication. He still became weaker and sicker by the hr. After all the tests where run they believed it must have been congenital kidney failure. In the mean time, we returned home and our (b) (6) (girl puppy) had vomitted and too had blood in her stool, we brought the stool sample and too rushed (b) (6) to the emergency clinic. 			after eating a large bowl, on wednesday i put just a few pieces of puppy chow into each of her meals. She ate all of her chicken and rice but would not eat the puppy chow, on thursday i put 1/2 of a cup into each meal, again she ate her chicken and rice around the food, leaving much of it behind (at this point, i just thought she was being picky) on friday a.m. so i soaked her puppy chow in water for 20 minutes with the chicken and rice, she puked out some and refused the rest, that morning she vomitted up the food she had eaten. It was then o realized it was the puppy chow, that night i fed her only the chicken and rice and she ate her whole bowl, in the mean time the diaheria had started again and the vomiting, again i took her to our vet the whole cycle started all over again, all the same symptoms with (b) (6), the vet took blood work, and our (b) (6) was having svere kidney failure, our l9cal vet could not believe what he was seing, and recommded a second opinion, that night we took (b) (6) back to the wmergency hospital, they kept he over night, ran numerous tests, and continued lv fluids, they where able to administer the iv , and controlled the vomiting and diahiarea, the next morning they sent us to another vet for further treatment, (b) (6) clinically was doing better, but her body was clearly shutting down. Her eyes began to bulge and her pupils where dialated . She seemed to be blind, we brought her home for the holiday weekend, and by the next morning, she and we had ,had enough. EON-224331	9/15/2015 16:56	4Health Mature Formula for Dogs, 4Health Indoor Adult Cat	I have fed the 3 Cats "4Health" "Indoor Cat" formula and the 3 Dogs "4Health" "Mature" formula for Dogs for the last 5 years. Approximately 1 month ago, I noticed my pets 3 cats and 3 dogs were not as aggressively eating their Food. I attributed this , at the time, to the hot weather. First I had an incident with a 13 year old male Cat (b) (6) who was urinating in the house. We had a urine test done which showed Crystals in urine and (sludgy) urine. At this point I started to switch the Cats over to "Hill's Science Diet" "Urinary/Hairball" formula. I noticed the cats would pick out the New (Science Diet) feed, and not eat the "4Health" that they HAD been on. At this point, concerned that there may be an issue with the feed. I began to switch the 3 Dogs over to "Hill's Science Diet" Large Breed mature (over 6 year old dogs) formula. I again saw an attempt to pick out the new food and leave the old. So I stopped mixing the 2 feeds and fed all the new feed. ALL appetites improved. There were no symptoms noticeable in the dogs until (b) (6) (b) (6) when (b) (6) (Edenhills Roamin Nose) my 10.5 year old Bloodhound became fully blocked in her Urethra and had to be put down. Once home, I opened the box and saw a puff of dust expel from the box. I looked in and each and every treat with a greenish/gray color, instead of tan. Each and every treat were fussy, and had a mold smell. This was reported to the store manager after returning the product, which we suggested the other boxes be checked and pulled if necessary. The manager at the time agreed to check and pull. We went back into the same store the next day (9/12/2015) as a follow up, and noticed the same boxes were still on shelf. A box was opened and found those treats were greenish/gray, fussy, and with a mold spell. Again, spoke with management about pulling off shelf, and again, he said they would. (9/13/2015) I went back into the store at 11:30am and pulled another box of "Milk Bone Mini" treats from the shelf, opened it, and saw the exact same greenish/gray, fussy, with a mold smell treats. I immediately walked up front of store with box in hand to locate a manager, I presented the moldy treats to manager and suggested they be pulled from shelf, and if not, it would be reported. He said "ok" then I left the store. I will go back into store to check for removal. However, don't trust the stores management as they have lied to me previously. This happened the early morning of Friday, August 21, 2015. I phoned Halo to report it, but there is only an 800 number with a long recording and finally direction to "leave a message". No one called me back for 5 days. When someone named "Olga" finally called me back 5 days after my call, she left the same 800 number. I have called them back several times and can only leave messages on this 800 number apparently main corporate line (no customer service extension or service available apparently). I have photos of the black plastic or rubber cord and of the codes on the bottom of the can. (I also have the can with the cord in my refrigerator). This has been very discouraging! The species of the tooth is unknown and is approximately 1 inch in size!! This is HORRIBLE! Before I discovered the tooth I was giving the food to my cats and I noticed they would not eat it! When they finally did nibble on it (for about a day or so) they became very tired, listless, acting like they were drugged! They would not eat or drink, and I had to actually carry them for them to move around, I thought they were going to die!!! I then found the tooth and immediately stopped giving them the food! They only reason I bought that brand was because Walmart (b) (6) didn't have my regular brand on the shelf where I could reach it - it was pushed way back on a top shelf. I have been trying for days to reach purina by phone & email and have had no luck! (Should I also try to reach Walmart and let them know?) This is just totally unacceptable! I have also been reading other reviews about Purina and their food, why has this company not been held liable for killing pets and making them sick! The store didn't have any in stock so I purchased Purina Beneful and fed 2 small bags of this to my dog and she has became ill. The first night of illness she woke us up during the night with the urge to have a bowel movement approximately every hour. The following day the urge hit her so bad that she could not hold it while we were at work and I came home to diarrhea all over the living room floor. The symptoms lessened at night. The following morning she had another episode of diarrhea while outside at potty time. Again, after coming home from work she had a very large episode of bloody diarrhea all over the living room floor. Took her outside to potty where she had more episodes of diarrhea. She began to vomit clear, foamy emesis and eating grass. I took my dog to the vet where fecal stool sample showed bacteria in her stool. she was mildly dehydrated and WBC count was slightly low. she received an infection and some PO medications to take at home. She had several more episodes of loose stools during the night. I got online and researched this dog food and noted that it had a recall in 2015. The dog continued to vomit and have diarrhea all night long. This morning she seemed to be acting some better. Again, I came home from work to find another episode of loose stools in my living room floor. I called the vet and discussed this dog food and she stated "yes, that is what caused her illness." She hasn't eaten in 3 days and just now being able to keep small amounts of water down. Both have always been in excellent health. I noticed with last 2 bags bought that the packaging had changed. I asked retail store if the formula had changed. No was their answer. I noticed my Border Collie eating less of the food from these new bags, which he used to devour. It became quite noticeable this past July. It got to the point where he would sniff it and walk away or take a few kibbles in his mouth and drop them and walk away. On August 16th 2015 he started having diarrhea with mucous and blood. Two days later, my Jack Russell Terrier, also 12 years old, started with the same symptoms. I took my Jack Russell to the vet and he was diagnosed with gastritis and pancreatitis caused by a food toxin. He seemed to be less picky about the Nutro dry food until the diarrhea started and then wouldn't touch it. He is now on Royal Canin gastrointestinal food, low fat. So far, their appetites have not been affected and my Border Collie's stools gradually cleared up, however my Jack Russell's have not. On September 1st my Border Collie vomited and had diarrhea. I took him to the vet. Blood tests revealed increased kidney enzymes. He is now on Hills kidney diet, both canned and dry food. The vet said that the kidney disease was caused by a food toxin. I never fed my 2 dogs anything but the Nutro Lamb and Rice dry dog food and the occasional Milk Bone for a treat. I researched for recalls for Nutro but found none. However, I did find the Consumer Affairs website with hundreds of similar complaints about Nutro food making their animals ill. great shape, neve even a schnauzer pump all 11 years I have been grooming him, he was so healthy, then bam, on his death bed.

Well, he began to cut bck eating the dog food, I had no ideal it was that, some how it got contaminated, he ate it all his life, then this bag, smelt not right, but took their word at the company, just a change in the formula was all.

(b) (6) was getting so much worse, then back to the bet on (b) (6), final vitsit, put on more stronger antibiotics, more pain pills, and sterioids. He was dying, and on the 3rd visit, I said, what did his blood work show, I was told by our vet, oh we did not do any blood work, but we will cross that bridge when we get to it, when is when, he is dying, but refused to do the blood work.

And also refused to put him down, I requested he be put down on (b) (6), he refused again, my little dog had a severe sizure on (b) (6) and passed.

Now, in his medical records, it says, did not have dermatitis, mis diagnosed, Likely cause of death, poisoning and he told me on the phone, it was dog food poisoning.

I was so upset.

I called and wrote to Taste of the Wild, I had sent them the bag, well guess what, they lost the bag and could not test it, and I gve them the lot and bar code, well that batch tested okay per our Quality Control.

No, it was not okay, my dog did not get ill until he ate it, never sick a day in his life, had eaten it all his life, and this bag was bad, but no, they insisted it was not.

Is it not good for them to lose the bag that I sent to them to be tested.

They all started vomiting as well. My 3 year old who never had an ear issue is scratching and complaining about her ear. Finally they went from happy fun playful dogs to sad, depressed, laying around dogs. They all slept through the night and the last 2 nights they each have woken up many times. EON-221582	8/31/2015 20:24	RACHAEL RAY NUTRISH super premium food for dogs. Real chicken and veggies recipe	Approximately three weeks ago on Sunday morning very early around 2a.m., my yorkie was circling the bed obviously very distraught. I took him out at least three times during the night, which he started throwing up his dinner and then mucous. At 8:30a.m. he threw up bright red blood and a lot of it. He did this a couple of times and then started having diarrhea also showing blood. I honestly thought he was going to die. He ravenously drank water and just kept throwing up all day and on Monday I took him to the vet (to be groomed, at which time I asked about this incident) and they thought maybe he had gotten a hold of something he chewed up or his food didn't settle and they had no answers. This dog however NEVER chews just to have something to chew on. He eats his own food and that's it. His nose was dry, and was very lethargic for several days. I even tried to give him a tums, unsuccessfully. It took him almost a week to get an appetite back at which time I only fed him rice/chicken. The suggestion from the vet. It has taken almost three weeks for him to show substantial improvement. He is still eating rice/chicken. It was not until this Saturday that my friend described the very same incident with her dog at the very same time. She even threw up the same amount of bright red blood. (she actually took a picture of it) ... Her vet didn't have any ideas either. We realized we had fed our dogs the very same dog food !!!! I then 'googled' the reviews and found out that quite a few people commented that their pets had had the very same reaction to this food that we had had! I still have the food and have fed none of it to him since before he became ill. I left my own review so others would know NOT to purchase this food. I also sent an email on Sunday to the Rachael Rae website where this food is listed and sold. I have heard nothing back from them. This was beyond scary....please get this food off the shelves.	7	Years	Dog	Terrier - Yorkshire	7	Pound

I put 1/8 of a cup on each of my dogs food (kibble) as usual and let them eat. After a few bites, (b) (6) I began coughing and gagging. He was in misery due to a small chicken bone that lodged in his throat! I pulled the food away from the other 2 dogs, threw (b) (6) in the jeep and ran to the emergency veterinarian to have (b) (6) treated. Upon our return home, I looked at the can, and ROASTED CHICKEN DRUMMET DINNER was a variety I had not tried before and had no experience which would have told me that they INTENTIONALLY leave the bones in the food! IF DESIRED, BREArroat isK UP THE SOFTENED BONES WITH A FORK FOR EASIER CONSUMPTION" This was NOT the case for (b) (6) as the piece that lodged in his throat is 2" long and 5/8" thick. I use "BRAKE-FAST" dog bowls to keep my dogs from gorging on their food, so (b) (6) didn't "wolf" his food; just normal bites before he started choking. If this company insists on leaving bones in their food ("special processing" or not!), they need to take extra precautions to let their customers know IN BOLD PRINT that a choking hazard exists. In the meantime, I have a dog hacking up blood and I'm out almost $1200.00 in vet bills!	7	Years	Dog	Retriever - Labrador	78	Pound

EON-221063	8/27/2015 11:48	Blue Buffalo Basics limited ingredients Grain-free formula Adult Turkey and potato	Our six Shih Tzu's have been eating Blue Buffalo products for over a year. Our dogs are our four legged kids. Several months ago we filed a complaint with the company because we observed a piece of what appeared to be plastic embedded in their food. (We still have the piece of food.) We sent photos of the defect and the quality control office said they would "look into" the issue; they offered some free dog treats. We accepted nothing from them and stressed the importance of their quality control. We continued to use the product, but began sorting through each bag of dog food after purchase to ensure no quality defects were observed. This past Thursday evening/Friday morning, our dog (b) (6), a 2 year old miniature Shih Tzu, became very ill with vomiting. After contacting our vet and (b) (6) still not being able to keep anything down, a visit to the emergency vet clinic resulted in an exam that determined an upset stomach; IV fluids and a shot to control vomiting. We returned home and kept (b) (6) on Chicken and Rice per the vets instructions until Monday. On Monday, we went to our normal vet for a check up, and he appeared to be recovering. The vet noted nothing out of the ordinary. We brought (b) (6) home and began feeding him lunch of the normal Blue Buffalo food. Within an hour or two he again began vomiting. We took him back to our vet and the blood work and other tests revealed normal levels. The vet administered an anti vomiting shot and fluids again, and additionally administered barium in order to do X-rays Tuesday morning to rule out an obstruction (although none was felt through exam.) We returned home and began doing research to find out there was a possibility that Blue Buffalo had recently began importing ingredients for their food from other countries and "making it" in the USA. Numerous stories of the same type of illnesses were reported on the internet about the Blue Buffalo product. We immediately removed the product and no longer feed it to the rest of the kids. Tuesday morning, the X-rays revealed a question in the stomach lining, and a few hours went by and more x-rays revealed a possible stomach issue. The decision was made to open (b) (6) up and physically examine the stomach. Two vets determined no obstructions in the stomach, and (b) (6) was closed back up. (b) (6) has returned home and is slowly recovering as of the typing of this report. He is extremely sore and requires 24 hour observation and care. We pray for his continued healing. There is no explanation for this illness, as the dogs are watched 24/7, and crated at night for sleep. They are all constantly cared for and observed in a very controlled environment. They do not even go out on grass, they go out in a run. Their dog room is again very safe for them. This product change is the only observable change that has been presented to their living systems- and the smallest dog became extremely ill.	2	Years	Dog	Shih Tzu	4	Pound

Seemed very uncomfortable....noises got worse to the point it woke my up in the morning. He started to act strange, walking in circles, hiding etc. Later, I came home to a house full of vomit, direaha and blood. We thought it may be just a gastrointestinal problem so we just took care of him. Finally after two days of being sick, we called the vet (on call on a Saturday). Explained the problem and she asked if he was drinking water. Which he was but he couldn't get enough water. No interest in anything else. It continued to escalate.. He became lathargic, weak, panting etc. So we called the vet again on Monday morning so we could bring him in. The Dr. said he is very dehydrated and very sick and uncomfortable so she took an xray on his abdomen and full blood work up. She came back and told me that he was in kidney failure and we had to try and get some urine to see if there is bacteria in there. After putting him on IV fluids, pain meds, etc. she finally got some urine and said there was a bacteria in it and we needed to act right away as his kidneys were shutting down. So, he is now on his second day of all day treatment at the vet hospital and we are hoping that his kidneys will be able to function normally again. They assessed her blood and did abdominal xrays with and without contrast. All results were normal, so they gave her an IV and force fed her. She returned home after a full day at the vet. (b) (6) would not eat and we took her for a second visit two days later. They again said the blood work was normal and advised to keep hydrating and feeding her (forcibly, if necessary). When she returned home, she began to drink excessive water and began to pee large amounts, even while sleeping and resting. We took her to an emergency vet, who performed a urinalysis and determined a high glucose level. The vet immediately suspected diabetes, but the blood sugar was low. So we went to her original vet, and explained the results and he indicated that this is not common and suspected an error on one of the tests. He now suspected Kennel cough, as he explained it "he has seen a lot of cases", even though (b) (6) was never exposed to other dogs, he prescribed antibiotics and sent her home again. (b) (6) continued to drink excessive water and pee continuously and not eat at all. We took her to another emergency vet hospital, where they diagnosed acute renal failure due to the tests they suspected acquired Fanconi's syndrome. The Vet suspected the Jerky treats. The symptoms described in the FDA website were exact. We tried to stabilize her electrolytes, but ultimately due to the severity of the kidney damage and her quality of life, we elected to put her down. This all transpired in the span of 10 days. In total we spent $4,000 trying to save her. She went from perfectly healthy dog to deceased during that time period. EON-220309	8/19/2015 13:44	PRECISE	For the last year this brand of Dog Food - PRECISE has had issue with the food being loaded with dog food "powder" crumbs and not the actual food. Sometimes almost 1/4 to 1/3 of bad consists of this and not the food. When the company was contacted I was told that this is a "Mom and Pop" company and that there was nothing wrong with the food. The problem has persisted and now my last two bags have had worms, bugs and MOLD on the food. There have been many customer complaints to the retailer who is (b) (6) in (b) (6) (b) (6)). The retailer (Managers - (b) (6) and (b) (6)) is aware of this issue and have contacted the distributor and rep but there has been no recall from the company. One of the customers stated they contacted the company and nothing was done about the issue. Could someone please send a FDA representative to this manufacturing plant for inspection before our animals get sicker or worse. I have had to fumigate my house do to the worms and bugs that have gotten in my house! 4 of my dogs refused to eat it and one dog got sick and wouldn't eat for 3 days before I realized the first bag was infested and moldy. The second bag....as soon as I opened it there were worms, bugs, mold and white things trying to hatch out of the center of the food holes. I took both bags back to (b) (6) to show the managers. Any assistance with this request would be GREATLY appreciated. BOTH managers at (b) (6) state they would welcome a call for confirmation and additional information if needed
EON-220277	8/19/2015 13:24	Pedigree Chicken flavored dry dog food	There are small black wires present in the Pedigree Chicken dog food. I came across another concerned pet owners post and thought it was just for hype. I cut open a few pieces of kibble from a brand new bag of dry dog food. I found the same black wires in the food. I have pictures of what I found and tried to contact the manufacturer. They have yet to respond to me. I also searched the web for any recalls and MARS has not issued any for contaminated food.

Monday afternoon/evening was the worst with extreme diarrhea and vomiting. Took him to the vet Tuesday and he had bacteria in his stool and was put on antibiotics. The vet advised a change in food could have caused it. But then I gave my mom the rest of the cans we had, her dog also got very sick and she took him to her vet, who conducted additional tests and said it was bacteria in his stool as well, antibiotics given. EON-220190	8/18/2015 17:36	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition Chicken Flavor	I saw a news report on tv and other posts on Facebook about there being shards of sharp material being found in their dry dog food. I feed my dog the same food and started going through the kibble myself. I found the same materials poking out of my dogs food that were pictured online and on the tv. Pedigree said that is was natural byproduct and that it was safe, but to me it would explain the lack on interest in eating from my doberman. I've never come across this with any other dog food and I do not think it is acceptable for Pedigree to permit this to be fed to our animals.

EON-220162	8/18/2015 15:44	Pedigree MarroBone Dog treat	I found multiple plastic-like fibers sticking out of and within my bag of Pedigree MarroBone dog treats. Each was roughly 1/4 an inch long and opaque white/tan in color. According to Pedigree's Twitter feed, people are finding these fibers in almost all of their products. Pedigree is claiming they are natural fibers and/or pig hairs. To my mind, even if they are pig hairs, they aren't something a dog can digest and shouldn't be ending up in dog treats or dog food.

EON-220086	8/17/2015 23:36	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition	Today, 8/17/2015 I saw a Facebook post about Pedigree dogfood having metal shavings in it. I've purchased the 55 lb Pedigree Mealtime food since January of 2015 at the local Costco. I haven't seen any systems of anything until the past week and a half. But didn't put the pieces together until the post. I immediately went to my dogs food dish. My husband got a papertowel out and we started to look through the food pieces. Within seconds, we started to see small black hair like fibers sticking out of the food. We proceeded to pull them out of the food and get a magnet. Sure enough, the magnet picked up the pieces confirming the metal substance. I immediately packed up the food and went to Costco. Costco stated they would have a manager review the return and noted it as a safety return. They also refunded my purchase. I've emailed Pedigree Customer Service with my concerns. I've also contacted my Vet for an appointment.

EON-220077	8/17/2015 22:00	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition Dry Dog Food	In June, I purchased my usual bag of Pedigree Adult Complete Dog Food from Walmart. I just thought it would take some time and then they would realize it was really the same but it wasn't and they didn't. I have 6 rescued beagles and they eat everything but they stopped eating and all of them got sick. I promptly changed their food and it has been a nightmare ever since getting them to eat again and trust the food I'm giving them. People are reporting hair-like items in the food and have posted pics all over the internet but I can't attest to that because I didn't notice myself and tossed the bag some time ago. But something is wrong with this food, go to Pedigree's Facebook page and the complaints are numerous along with many postings on animal welfare sites. Pedigree should be investigated, they should have to pay back customers that have been effected by this inferior and possibly deadly product. I will be reluctant to trust them again.			Dog	Beagle

EON-220051	8/17/2015 18:41	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition-Chicken Flavor	Today 08/17/2015 I was notified on Facebook about foreign objects found in Pedigree dog food. I was informed that these foreign objects consisted of black/ white fibers sticking out of the kibble pieces. Upon hearing this, I wanted to investigate myself. I put my dog's food (Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition-Chicken Flavor) on a plate to see if I could see anything out of the ordinary. Sure enough, there was black, very sharp objects sticking out of the kibble. They were sharp enough to poke my finger. I cant imagine how it feels as my dog's are eating it! I purchased this bag of food at Walmart in (b) (6) on 08/06/2015. I reviewed it online and there was a recall in 08/2014. As far as I'm concerned this should still be recalled because it isn't healthy.

So i changed to Fancy feast and my cat was still throwing up. I looked up the food online and realized loads of owners of cats have complained of this food and there cats died. I was stunned . Here this food is still on the shelf of stores. I looking for food that Purina does not make. I now give my cat Authority brand . Pet mart makes and my cat is doing better now. There is poison in this food . It will kill. There needs to be a recall on this food now. I called the company and they sent me free food coupons. I called them back and said, this kills cats. I would not even want my friends to give this to there cats. They need to recall and they said sorry but there is not recall. I said, how do i get a recall in and they decline to comment and sent me more coupons. I told my vet , the store pet Mart and rescue paws and it was still on the shelf. Although Rescue paws is not giving this food to there pets. Also I told the manage of the store (b) (6) pet mart and she was stunned of the results online. Please look into this and recall this food. EON-220042	8/17/2015 18:39	Pedigree adult complete nutrition chicken flavored	I was on Facebook and saw a post of a women posted about her Pedigree dog food. She state that her dogs food had little pieces of what looked like plastic. I also buy Pedigree for my dogs so I went and got a scoop of their dog food to check. I noticed several pieces with what looked liked clear plastic sticking out of the food. This made me very concerned because the clear forean object sticking out of the dog food was very hard and pointed. If a dog eats this food it could possible puncture the stomach lining or make them very sick if plastic. Please take this seriously. This is a big concern and I would never buy dog food knowing it has plastic in it.

The photo on the can also shows the chunks of chicken and rice, identical to the other "in gravy" products they sell. Their response was "I'm glad that you were able to provide us with the UPC from this can as I can confirm that the product you have is actually our Ground Dinner canned food, and not our Chunks canned food. The product is not mislabeled. I understand your confusion as the can does show 'chunks' of chicken, however this is to show you what ingredients are in the food, not a representation of the consistency of the food." EON-220031	8/17/2015 18:37	Whiskas Temptations Savory Salmon Flavor treats for cats	Our cat (b) (6) (above) was fine, healthy and happy Saturday morning, (b) (6). Around noon we noticed she seemed to be in a lot of pain and in distress, meowing and unable to move her rear legs. We called our vet and left a message, expecting a return call. When he didn't call after several hours we rushed (b) (6) to a 24-hour vet hospital. She was given something for the pain and we were told to follow up with her regular vet which we did on Monday (b) (6). By then she was much, much worse, unable to eat, drink, or move, and looking very dehydrated. Her Vet said it didn't look good and put her on an IV for fluids and nutrition. When she didn't respond (get any better) by Thursday, (b) (6), we had her put to sleep. This past Saturday, (b) (6), our almost-1-year old kitten, (b) (6), was also in perfect health as we were leaving to go to a party. Just before we left I gave him maybe 5 - 10 Whiskas Temptations salmon flavored cat treats in his Snacky Mouse. Both he and (b) (6) (above) loved them, while our 15-year old (b) (6) did not (she never ate them). We returned home 4 or 5 hours later to find little (b) (6) in pain, unable to move his limbs, screeching, tongue hanging out of the side of his mouth and panting. His eyes were rolling back in his head as we picked him up to rush him to the vet. He died in the car, in my husbands arms, less than five minutes later. We began researching the cats' symptoms online and stumbled across a few blogs about these treats, and how owners complained of their cats becoming sick after eating them. Some even died, just like our (b) (6) and (b) (6). The salmon flavor was the one with the most complaints. Examining everything the 2 dead cats had in common and what they did not (they did not eat the same commercial cat foods, for example; (b) (6) was still on kitten food), as well as why (b) (6) in the same environment and eating the same foods as (b) (6), was perfectly fine, the only common denominator we could find was the Temptations treats. Also, the effect on (b) (6) after eating them was almost immediate. We have always alternated between foods to give our cats something new to try out & always looked for what we thought would be the best quality food for our cats health. They have always loved the food we've given them and never have we had any problems until we switched to Friskies Grillers for the first time. We have never fed them Friskies/Purina products before but after looking at them they seemed to be a great choice. We bought a 16 pound bag of it on Friday. Later that night after feeding it to them for the first time we noticed a couple of our cats vomiting and didn't think much of it at the time. Over the course of the next couple days all of our cats became ill & were all vomiting and at that time we realized that the only way that they all could've become ill was from the new food. Then our 8 month old tabby became ill to the point that he died from it very quickly. We are very devastated about this and certainly hope none of our other cats die from this. EON-218745	8/3/2015 10:12	Hill's Prescription Diet k/d Feline, Hill's Prescription Diet w/d Feline	After buying the latest "Brand New Look, Same Great Nutrition" Hill's w/d (wet) and k/d (dry), I noticed a difference in both appearance and smell in both items. Assured by my vet that the formula hadn't changed, I did not transition to this food but instead continued to feed (b) (6) the Hill's diet as before. He had diarrhea for a few weeks, and still is experiencing this. I compared the ingredients from an old bag of k/d (dry) with the ingredients for the "brand new look, same great nutrition" k/d (dry) and they ARE DIFFERENT! I have been reading forums where others are having similar, or worse, problems and I would like some answers as to how a company that can sell food to the most sensitive and vulnerable (prescription diet is meant for animals with health conditions, sometime very serious ones), can simple change the ingredients in their foods with no warning, and, in fact is allowed to pretend that nothing is amiss -that nothing is different with their food?! I can see that the nutrition label is the exact same as before for the Hill's w/d, but how can this be with such a change in formula?! I do not believe that a new crude analysis was done on this food to result in the exact same nutritional values for a completely different formula. I believe what the company is doing is criminal and there should be a serious inquiry into this matter!	15	Years	Cat	Unknown	12	Pound

The symptoms persisted for 2 weeks until I figured out it was the catfood based on searching the internet for issues similar to mine. I switched them to Purina Naturals and the vomiting/stool issue cleared up immediately. What amazes me is that there are 100s of online complaints regarding the 9Lives brand resulting in horrible symptoms and cases of death starting around December of 2014 yet there have been no recalls. The manufacturer of 9Lives is Big Heart Pet Brands, 1 Maritime Plz # 700, San Francisco CA 94111. EON-218038	7/28/2015 15:04	EVO Grainfree Turkey and Chicken Formula Cat and Kitten	I breed Persian and Himalayan kittens. My breeders regularly have cardiac ultrasounds to make sure their hearts are normal and remain normal. On 8/8/14, (b) (6) had a Cardiac Ultrasound performed at (b) (6) in (b) (6), (b) (6). Her heart was found to be normal. In January, 2015, I switched my whole Cattery over to the EVO Turkey and Chicken Cat and Kitten dry food. At the same time, four of my breeding girls were pregnant. All four mothers had normal babies while on the food. On 6/30/15, I took (b) (6) down for her two year old heart scan at (b) (6) in (b) (6). At the time, she was nursing 6 kittens. During her heart scan, it was found that she had mild Dilated Cardiomyopathy (DCM). This came as a shock since I have never had any of my breeders have this heart disease. (b) (6) of the (b) (6) put her on Vetri-Science Cardio Supplements once a day and told me to bring her back for another scan in six months. Upon researching DCM, I found that the main cause could be lack of Taurine in the diet. Since I had just started the EVO food in my Cattery in January 2015, I was suspecting the food as the cause of a Taurine Deficiency causing the DCM. I also knew that EVO had a voluntary recall of this exact food in November 2014 for inadequate supplements in the food. So on June 30 2015, I put all kittens and cats in my Cattery on Taurine Supplementation of 250 mg per 1 cup of dry food. I also added in Doc Roy's Absorb More to ensure that nutrients were being absorbed by everyone. I also placed (b) (6) on this additional supplementation. So she would be getting roughly 500 mg of Taurine supplementation as well as the Absorb More. I also took (b) (6) away from the 6 kittens she had been nursing as soon as I found out on June 30, 2015. I was worried that they too might have a Taurine deficiency from her milk. On July 21, 2015, three weeks after putting her on the Taurine supplementation of 500 mg a day, I took her back down to (b) (6) in (b) (6) for another Cardiac Ultrasound to see if there was any improvement in her heart. To my Vet's surprise, she had a "marked improvement" in her DCM. In fact, her heart was almost back to normal. This can be documented on each Scan's report with the measurements. It is my Vet's opinion, as well as my own, that this food, EVO Turkey/Chicken Cat/Kitten dry food is lacking in Taurine, an essential amino acid that is required to be in all cat foods. It is also our opinion that maybe the Taurine gets put in the food but because of the high processing of the food, that the Taurine becomes not viable. Since most cats on EVO do not have regular Cardiac Ultrascans, there is no way of a pet parent or even breeder to know that their cat might have DCM. Symptoms of DCM are very much similar to HCM. On July 28, 2015, I contacted EVO Customer Service and reported the problem. They did not ask for the Cardiac Ultrasound results. I did state to them that I had kept all information of the bags of EVO purchased since March 13, 2015. I go through lots of bags of EVO dry food at my Cattery and due to all their past recalls thought this was a wise move. I do not have manufacturing codes for bags bought between Jan 1, 2015 and March 13, 2015. But since the kittens were born normal, my gut feeling tells me this problem of Taurine Deficiency occurred after the birthing of the 4 litters ... between April 4, 2015 and forward.	2	Years	Cat	Himalayan	6.6	Pound

I heard that there was a recall of Beneful Healthy Weight dry dog food. (b) (6) hadn't been sick from it so far, however my husband and I decided not to take any chances and we threw the remaining dog food in the trash. I then bought some Hill W/D dry dog food from the vet. About a week or two ago (b) (6) started eating less. He started refusing treats as well. Since he was 10 pounds overweight I didn't worry too much about this. I noticed he was losing his balance while I was walking him. On (b) (6), my step-daughter and a girl-friend visited us. (b) (6) barely had the energy to greet (b) (6) and he ignored the other girl. (He was a dog that loved people and loved interacting with people) He vomited some bile on the carpet. I called the vet and made an appointment for Saturday. Wednesday he was much worse. He vomited two more times. He looked like he was losing weight. I called the Vet and made the soonest available appointment which was Thursday afternoon. The vet drew some blood and called us the results. (b) (6) was in kidney failure. I thought he looked and acted like he had been poisoned. His weight had gone down from 65# to 53# very fast. The vet tried IV therapy to kick-start the kidneys and flush out toxins. He was on IV therapy Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The 2 vets at the Emergency Clinic said he was very sick and his kidney values weren't improving like they had hoped they would. They faxed the reports to (b) (6). Also, (b) (6) was very weak. He had trouble squatting to urinate and when he walked a little then his hind legs would buckle and he had to drag them with him. Monday a.m. (b) (6) looked much worse. He was incontinent of urine and diarrhea. The vet gave us 3 options: to see a specialist in (b) (6), to send him for a kidney transplant (and the dog that shared his kidney would be ours, too), or to put him down. We didn't have an extra $10,000 for a kidney transplant and the vet didn't think the specialist could do much more. We made the decision to put him to sleep and end his misery. As we were looking up kidney failure in dogs on the internet I found stories of other dogs with similar symptoms after eating Beneful. The vets told me this just didn't happen overnight, that it had been progressing for awhile. We had been feeding him Beneful for the last 6	11	Years	Dog	Spaniel - Springer English	53	Pound

			months or so. One of the vets didn't think it had anything to do with the dog food. (b) (6) thought it's possible he got a bad batch. I think that Beneful should be taken off the market and independent studies should be done on dogs fed this diet. The study would have to last 1-2 years. It would be interesting to see the percentage of dogs that end up dead and/or sick. I read that there is concern about the mycotoxins and the Propyleneglyco in the food. I can't believe the FDA allows these in human and dog food, but not cats! I am going to contact Publix grocery stores too. My heart is broken because (b) (6) was the sweetest, most loving dog in the world. I'll never find another dog like him again. BUT I GUARANTEE I WON'T FEED THE NEXT DOG BENEFUL!!! EON-217476	7/25/2015 21:00	Beneful Healthy Smiles	The following is the information I submitted to Purina. I purchased a bag of Beneful Healthy Smiles dog food today. While this normally is the food that I choose for my dog, after today, that will no longer happen. I brought the bag home, immediately opened, reached in and got some out. As I was putting the food in my dog's plate, I noticed several of the pieces clumped together with what seemed to be some type of stringy material. At this point, I looked in the bag and found worms and some type of flying insect in the bag. I immediately snatched the food back up, so my dog would not get sick off of the tainted food. I'm not sure what these worms and insects are, but it is of unacceptable quality for any food. I promptly closed the bag, after taking pictures and video, and returned to the store I purchased from. Upon my arrival, the cashier told me of another bag that was returned today, after being purchased shortly before. This was a bag of Purina cat food. The only bright side of this story is my dog, a very loved member of my family, did NOT consume any of this disgusting food. I am unsure of your quality control practices, but providing quality food should be higher on your priority list. Before you blame faulty packaging, please be aware, there were NO tears or open spaces in this bag where insects could've gotten in. My questions to you are: what are you going to do to rectify this situation and how/when will you inform the public there may be a problem with your products?? I am attaching pictures and video of what I saw today when I opened the bag. I am only able to upload one image, please respond so I can share the other disgusting pictures and videos with you.

The vet determined he had allergies and nothing significant was wrong. We were given medicine for him to take for 2 weeks. She was slightly concerned about his weight and suggested we put him on a canned diet and recommended Blue Buffalo. A month after switching to Blue Buffalo, our cat developed pancreatitis and became severely ill. He almost didn't make it. After doing some research online, I have found several pet parents that have also said their cat/dog had either died or gotten severely ill from Blue Buffalo. Several of their pets also developed pancreatitis. I submitted a claim to Blue Buffalo and they said there is no proof that their food caused my cat to get ill.	2	Years	Cat	Domestic Mediumhair	13	Pound

EON-216850	7/21/2015 18:52	Blue Bits Natural Soft Training Treats Tender Beef Recipe	I adopted a 13 week old Husky puppy last week. Took her to the vet for her first check up, she was given a 100% clean bill of health. Three days later she died from an allergic reaction/poisoning that closed her airway and suffocated her to death. The last thing she ate..... Blue Buffalo training treats. She didn't choke on the treat either, she died 10 hrs after eating it. First sings of problems started about 6 hours after consuming the product. I attributed the gagging and discomfort to motion sickness as we were in the car. Symptoms got increasingly worse over then next couple of hours, again thinking that it was motion sickness related. Finally she was able to vomit and once she did that, she could not catch her breath and slowly suffocated. It was the most violent death I have ever seen, heaving and gasping for air, and vomiting. She has had a necropsy done and the vet is baffled because she had perfectly healthy organs, found absolutely no obstruction, and he has ruled out Parvo or any sort of genetic fault.	13	Weeks	Dog	Siberian Husky	13.5	Pound

EON-216310	7/20/2015 6:16	Nutro The Natural Choice Senior Chien Age Chicken Whole Brown Rice and Oatmeal Recipe	On May 27, 2014, I purchased a 30 pound bag of Nutro Original Senior Dogfood Chicken Brown Rice and Oatmeal dogfood from Petco. I had a coupon that expired 5/31/15, so I purchased the food a bit early to take advantage of that. I did not begin using the new bag until approximately 6/11/15. On 6/13/15 at about 1:30 p.m., I left my home to fly to (b) (6) to attend my son's college graduation. I returned home at approximately 1:00 a.m. on 6/15/15. When I woke up at approximately 10:00 a.m. on 6/15/15, both of my dogs had soiled my bedroom with extremely large (larger than mine) stools containing a lot of mucus. They were also vomiting yellow foamy bile more than usual (more about this later). Also, the poops were frequent (4-7 times per day as compared to their usual 1-2 times per day). My initial thought was that was the result of me being gone and they were stressed, despite the fact that I attended the same son's wedding in March and was gone for 3 days without any problems. I put both of them on a diet of rice, boiled hamburger and/or chicken and a little bit of pumpkin. Symptoms quickly resolved. I began slowly substituting the Nutro for a portion of the rice mixture, at first about 10 kernels of it, gradually increasing. When the amount of dogfood in the mixture was between 1/4-1/3 cup, symptoms returned. I repeated this process 3X over the next week or so, and everytime the level of Nutro was 1/4-1/3 cup, symptoms returned. Out of desperation, I purchased a bag of Rachael Ray's Nutrish at the supermarket and gradually reintroduced it as above. They are currently eating only Nutrish and there has not been a single episode of vomiting, loose stools, etc. since then. In retrospect, the yellow foamy vomiting started about 3 years ago for both dogs. One of them vomited anywhere from 3-7 days per week (2X per day) and the other one vomited anywhere from 1-5 days per week. Again, in retrospect, at the time the vomiting started a few years ago, their poop was a yellow/orange like color. On the Nutrish, their poop has turned a normal brown color and the size and consistency of it seems appropriate to their weight and how much they have eaten.	9	Years	Dog	Shih Tzu	12	Pound
EON-216299	7/19/2015 16:24	Purina Beneful Original	Following the death of my dog, I found that many other dogs had been sickened or died after eating the same brand of dog food, Purina Beneful. I have a science background and more than 30 years experience in Quality Assurance and am convinced that these dog deaths are not random events and associated with the food they received. I have spent the last 2 1/2 months researching this issue and have found that there are at least three sources of microbiological toxins that can enter the ingredients of this food, some are tested for and others are not. Testing for a contaminant that may cause problems at a rate of one in a thousand is not realistic, only a HACCP program will be effective. There is no evidence that Purina has critical controls for these toxins. There are also other ingredients in the Purina formulations that facilitate the uptake of microbiological toxins and accentuate their toxicity once in the bloodstream. Purina claims that their products are 100% safe, the reported customer complains would suggest that this is not true. These products should be recalled.

It helps me determine if pollen, fatty deposits, and other things were purposely introduced or if there is an environmental problem. I very quickly noticed that almost all of them had one thing in common. They were giving Superior Nutrition's Green Vitamins. I mentioned this to a colleague of mine and she relayed to me that she had a huge issue with her dragon population after using Beth's gutload. She prompted me to look into Chlorella Algae and it's origins. As it comes primarily from South Asia it is not well regulated and often contaminated. It is possible something else triggered the health events, but the only thing that changed from my perspective was the addition of the treats. I quit giving the treats after the first few bouts of diarrhea, and 48 hours later he was still suffering from diarrhea and was acting lethargic.			Dog	Hound (unspecified)
EON-215492	7/12/2015 10:40	Purina ONE Smartblend chicken and rice formula	(b) (6) began to eat "Purina One- lamb and rice formula" late (b) (6), but was mostly just eating the pieces of lamb and leaving the rest. He began to vomit after a few weeks of eating it, but because he had a sensitive stomach and was such a picky eater I decided to change his food and try the Purina One-chicken and rice formula" instead because he liked the Purina food, but was usually used to eating chicken. He ate the chicken kind for about another 3 weeks and again was mostly just eating the pieces of chicken. (b) (6) then began to vomit again so I stopped giving him the food and tried to nurse him back to health, thinking that the food was probably just too much for him for some reason. He started to vomit his own feces which led to dehydration and before I knew it he was bleeding from his nose and suffering from a seizure. I was unaware she gave the dental chews to her that day. I was then off work the next couple of days. (b) (6) did not eat for those two days, but eventually got better. My mother then watched her on the third day and gave her the dental chews. (b) (6) again became ill and vomited numerous times. Small green particles were seen in the bile vomit, which I collected in a vile. I took (b) (6) to the veterinarian and blood work and IV fluids were given at the hospital. (b) (6) lost 8 lbs. in the five days. (b) (6) only eats dry Natures Wild dog food and eats no table or human food. I was unaware of my mother giving the dental chews until after taking her to the veterinarian. Mars company was contacted and a vet tech denied responsibility for the claim. EON-215345	7/10/2015 11:40	9 LIVES LIVER AND BACON DINNER	I feed my 2 small dogs 1/2 can of canned 9 Lives Cat Food twice a day mixed in with their dry dog food so I store the leftovers after I open the can in the refrigerator. The problem is this: I re-warm for the next meal the remainder for 20 seconds on a Dixie Brand paper plate or paper bowl before serving it in their food . Today makes the 4th time in 2 weeks that a HUGE LASTING SPARK generates from the food in the microwave when I heat the food. To clarify I take the food with a pop top lid over it out of the refrigerator and empty contents using a spoon onto a paper product throwing out the can and lid, then heat for 20 seconds. With these Huge Spark that last almost the whole 20 seconds it has me worried about what kind of METAL they are allowing to get into the cat food. I certainly do not want to harm my dogs when the company obviously is letting something get in the food during processing that it should NOT. I use a variety of flavors but this last can came in a 9 pack of cans and today the one that SPARKS was the Liver and Bacon Dinner Thank you if you contact the manufacturer about this. The breeder gave us a puppy package that included a small bag of Purina Puppy Chow. Once home, I opened the sealed bag of food and poured it into a small feeding dish. The puppy immediately started eating. As I was placing the food in a zip lock bag, I noticed something shiny sticking out of my puppies mouth. She had a 1 1/2 inch screw hook in her mouth. Fortunately, I was able to pry her mouth open enough to remove the screw. I immediately took the dog food away from her. When pouring out the remaining puppy food, I found a rusted 2 inch screw hook in the puppy chow. I made an air tight culture of the powdered slurry buy adding distilled water in a sterile, screw top, vial in an attempt to rehydrate any ovum and also delay hatching. After 3 days I analyzed a slide from the culture which clearly showed roundworm ovum.. There are also other ovum-like objects I am seeing but am not able to identify. I am a wholistic doctor, therapist and medical intuitive and animal communicator and observed that these dogs are severly ill after eating this food, their coats have a lot of radiation coming from their coats which wick out impurities from their systems. One animal has gone blind and the other ones eyes are beginning to turn blue, and the other dogs eyes has a coat beginning over the cornea. Please check this product for acetametaphin, a cancer causing agent which produces a black insidiuous yeast type overgrowth in the blood stream, trazadone and chiadone and cyanide. It also contains harmful food colorings and the only listed ingredients are cornmeal and soy and none of the listed ingredients are in the product. One dog is severly thin, he wont let his female companion eat the food I observed and the other dog is dying and came to me for help. So I tried to tell the owner so hopefully he will change foods because they are not eating the food and I give them eggs, etc to supplement their diet because they are almost starving to death and I feel this food is poisoned on purpose by the producers of this product. Some people are cruel and don't like animals and put things on the market for that reason. Trazadone and Chiadone are in itself deadly drugs I wouldn't give a rattle snake and shouldn't be in pet food or on the market. I was was prescribed these drugs for sleep and almost died and doctors are so indoctrinated and lied to by drug reps OR they know what they are doing. The date below is just an estimate The bones are used as treats for when the dog(s) come in from the outside. The batch number on the box is 5062 1K 04 0656. I set the box on my dryer and a short time later I noticed an increasing problem with moths in the house. I thought it might have something to do with having the screens/windows open, but the problem just continued. This past week, my daughter from (b) (6) and her husband and dogs were up for the week. She told me Saturday, 7/4/15, she thought the dog bone box was the source of the moths. Today I took all the remaining bones out of the box and placed them in plastic bags and put the box in the trash. I noted about about 30 minutes moth pupae appearing on the inside of the plastic bags with the bones. In inside of the box had several adult moths and some pupae as well. I notified the manufacture, but later in the afternoon, when I looked that plastic bag I saw some of the moth pupae actually going into holes on the dog bones. I took photographs of the box, batch number, inside of the box and the inside of the plastic bags, demonstrating the presence of the adult moths and the pupae. I was just going to throw the box and bones out, but then I thought it could be something greater than an isolated issue, so I have the plastic zip loc bags and the bones, and placed the box into a kitchen trash bag and sealed it with a bag tie just in case you were interested in this. I found no evidence of the moths coming from inside the cubbard, it seemed all related to the box which was allowed to be open on the dryer. The boxes do not come with any sealing mechanism.

EON-215059	7/6/2015 18:08	Stella & Chewy's Chicken Dinner Patties	On June 7 I fed 9 of my 10 dogs Stella and Chewys Freeze Dried Chicken Patties for dinner. One of my dogs, (b) (6), vomited her entire dinner approximately 1 hour after having eaten. All other dogs were fine. The next morning, (b) (6) again vomited, twice, but it was all bile this time. (b) (6) spent the day at the vet having tests run and receiving sub-q fluids. Since she stopped vomiting she was sent home. From June 8 to June 10 (b) (6) was unable to defecate normally, acting like it was very painful and avoiding as long as possible to do so. The stools were very loose and yellow, mostly puddles. On June 10 I took (b) (6) to the emergency hospital because she was still not able to defecate normally. She spent the night there and had a barage of tests. The ultrasound showed an inflamed intestine and an enlarged liver and lymph nodes. Bloodwork was unremarkable. Because 3 different ultrasounds within these 2 days at the ER hospital showed that food in her stomach was not moving, she had no motility in her GI tract, she was started on metoclopramide and metronidazole. She was sent home on June 11 on metoclopramide, metronidazole. We had a consult with an internal med specialist at the hospital on June 17. All test results were back and her cortisol levels were low, so an Addison's test was done at our regular vet on June 18 which resulted in a negative diagnosis for Addison's. She was to be kept on metoclopramide and metronidazole, and in addition was on two different courses of Panacur in case fecal results were inaccurate. To date she has completed one course of the Panacur. She began to have normally recurring stools and I gradually weaned her off of the metoclopramide, she is now able to defecate on her own. She continues to be on metronidazole, her stools are still often soft. She has had a ravenous appetite throughout this malady, but has been somewhat lethargic and has no energy. Her behavior has been odd, she is normally a very sweet disposition dog with my other dogs but she has become growly and irritable at home now. Becasue a B12 deficiency was discovered when a GI panel was done, she is receiving weekly B12 injections. She has in addition recently in the past week been licking her vulva a lot and has had a few incontinence episodes. 			Freeze Dried chicken patties which I had been feeding to my dogs. When Kenzie first vomited on June 7, I discontinued feeding my dogs out of that bag for safety reasons, but I did keep the bag for some reason my gut told me to do so. When I heard of the recall on the Stella and Chewys freeze fried chicken patties and saw the Lot #111-15, I looked at the bag that (b) (6) had eaten just prior to becoming sick, and it was this lot number. I bought this food from Doggie Delights in (b) (6) during the first week of June 2015. Due to the potential for Listeria contamination of the food that (b) (6) had eaten, I spoke with her Internal Med specialist yesterday who recommended getting a Listeria fecal culture done. I took (b) (6) in to my vet today who did both a urine culture and a fecal culture testing for Listeriosis. Results will not be back for possibly a week. (b) (6) is still not acting normally, very irritable, less energy, and has lost almost 4 pounds throughout this illness. She is now able to move food through her digestive tract without the help of meds, but is still on the metronidazole and is only being fed a special diet of Purina EN and boiled whitemeat chicken breast with fortiflora once a day.

She eats raw rabbit and I'm normally the one that feeds her because of all the supplements that go into her food. Thirty minutes after she ate, during our morning walk, the seizure occurred. She is a 9 year old English Bulldog and has never had a seizure. This one was her first. I rushed her to the ER vet and then to my general vet for blood work to see what could have caused her to have a seizure. Her blood work came back perfectly normal. That night, I went to feed her dinner and I noticed her Stella and Chewy's rabbit patty was white when it is normally red. I pulled all the patties out of the bag and they were all white. I opened another bag and they were red as were the next bag I opened. I thought it could be freezer burn so I cut them in half and they were white through and through. I fed her a different food and sent an email to my Stella and Chewy's representative stating my concerns. I also attached several photos along with the different batch numbers and explained that there were two different bags of the same product in the photo I attached. The next day Emily from Stella and Chewy's called me and said that the photo I sent them showed that one patty had obviously gotten stuck when freezing which caused that one patty to turn white. I asked her if she even read my email because it showed two different patties from two different bags as well as two different lot numbers and two different expiration dates. She then changed her story and said that a difference in color like that is completely normal. I asked if she was even interested in testing the patties and she said that they already were tested and there was nothing she could do. I asked her how they could have already been tested when they were still in my possession. After more back and forth with no explanation as to why the patties were not the same as every other bag of raw rabbit I have fed Emily asked me what I wanted her to do. I said I wanted an investigation done to find out why these patties were different and if they could have caused my dog to have a seizure. Luckily, (b) (6) is ok and she has not had another episode since that day. Did the food cause her seizure? I don't know for sure. I didn't ask for a refund, I didn't ask for them to pay my vet bills, all I asked for was for them to check this product which may have caused harm to my dog or may cause harm to other dogs. Instead their response was to ignore my emails and phone calls. I own a natural pet food store and my customers know how particular I am when it comes to products I sell in my store. It not only comes down to where the items are made and sourced but also how the company is run and how they handle any issues that may occur. Stella and Chewy's finally followed up with me 2 months later and told me to go buy a freezer, ice packs, etc and send the bag back to them. I recently purchased three bags. He began having severe vomiting and diarrhea after eating this bag of food. We rushed him to the vet and he was given antibiotics and vomiting and anti-diarrheal medication. I stopped the dog food and fed him a diet of plain boiled chicken for a week. He was getting a lot better. I threw away the first bag of the dog food and opened up a new bag. I fed him some of it. The vomiting and diarrhea started up again. Now I have him eating the chicken and another brand of dog food. he is doing much better again now. I am worried that there is something wrong with this food, like salmonella or something. I know the bags have recently changed. I have reported the issue to the manufacture. PLEASE check on this food. If you look at the Consumer Affairs site online there are MANY recent complaints with just about the same symptoms. My dog went from pretty good health to very ill quickly while eating this food. (We had been feeding it to her for the past couple of Months.) Saturday morning she had a very soft stool. At 7:30 am was again fed 2/3 cup of the SmartBlend, by 10:00 am she started having explosive diarrhea which became more watery, bloody and mucousy throughout the day. Saturday evening we called the vet. He recommended withholding food for 24 hours after which give her hamburger and rice. By Tuesday evening her stool had started firming up so we mixed a little of the Purina One SmartBlend (1/4cup) with the hamburger and rice. That night she again had multiple bouts of very watery diarrhea with blood and mucous in it. We put her back on hamburger and rice. This morning (Thursday) she is finally starting to have slightly firmer stool. We always take her out on the leash and did not observe her eating anything else that could have made her sick. I then kept a watch on her the next 3 days and noticed her bathroom habits were not the same. On Wednesday (b) (6) she was not eating and was sick I took her to the Vet and they told me she had severely high levels of phosphorous levels to a point of end stage kidney failure. Shocked me because her last visit at the Vet in December she was completely healthy. Vet said they could try her on Sub Q fluids and switched her to prescription diet food Hills K/D (this is when she stopped the intake of the Rachael Ray food to a switch of the prescribed Hills K/d) did this for the next 3 days back and forth to Vet each day. On Friday they said her phosphorous had gone down to a safe enough level to admit her into the hospital for IV fluids. She spent 4 days in the Vet hospital over (b) (6) I picked her up on Tuesday (b) (6), and brought her home she was better but lethargic still had higher then normal phosphorous levels but due to the extremely high levels the week before she had suffered kidney damage. (b) (6) seemed better after fluids, but on Saturday dehydration set back in I rushed her to an Animal after hours emergency clinic they did more fluids and on Tuesday (b) (6) the vet said that she had such high phosphorous levels and this caused extreme damage to her kidneys there was nothing more they could do. I keep all of my receipts for reporting purposes and I pulled the receipt with the purchase of Rachael Ray cat food the 12 pack with UPC code and it matched the chicken 12 pack as being recalled for high Vitamin D levels which causes high phosphorous levels. I went to Wal-Mart and confirmed they had pulled it off the shelves and called the Nutrish Rachael Ray company trying to file a report and they said all they could do is offer a coupon for more food. How insulting to recall food my cat has just died from ingesting it and they would like my name and address to send me a coupon for more, insulting is a mild statement. My little (b) (6) is dead and I know it is due to the exact food recalled by Rachael Ray Cat Food 12 pack I have proof, and I am very upset. I have two other male cats that used to come up to her bowl to eat her Naturals formula, but after they initially (that first day) did come to eat some of her cat food, they did not come up to her food any more. She would just lay in her bed under my desk after about day 3, I never made the connection at the time. I happened to be home on the Sunday, (b) (6), that she collapsed after vomiting clear with a red tinge, I talked to her and asked what was wrong, she just laid there in her own vomit, that's when I picked her up and realized that she was awake but couldn't move, her eyes looked at me with a frantic-ness that said "help me", I grabbed a towel and wrapped her in it and ran to my phone and called my vet. He lives about a half hour from our town, he said to keep her calm and watch her breathing and to watch for any more vomiting to keep her airway clear, he was on his way. After I hung up, I started cleaning the vomit off her, talking calmly to her that help was coming, how much I loved her. Within 15 minutes from ending the call with my vet, she tensed up and vomited what I can only describe as bile, I felt it coming and turned her face to the floor to keep her airway clear, I then used papertowels to clean her face and mouth area, when I turned her back towards me her eyes told me she was gone. I sat there with her for a few minutes, than called the vet to inform him that she was gone, he said that he would be there shortly and that we could bring her to him and he would make the necessary arrangements for cremation. The only change that had been made with her, was the change in food. We kept giving him water and then the next day he would not eat, this was very strange since he always ate his food. after being sick for three days we called and no vet was open on Sunday. That next morning we video taped his symptoms and saved the dog food bag, he died at 6 am. he was in perfect health prior to this.	12	Years	Dog	Doberman Pinscher	120	Pound
EON-212053	6/15/2015 19:20	Purina Beneful Original 100% Complete and Balanced Nutrition	I have a great Dane that has always been very active and healthy. I began feeding him Beneful Original about 3 weeks ago. He continued to be active but he would get winded easily and needed more water than usual. I thought it was due to the heat and just didn't push him on our evening jogs and even shortened the walks so not to tire him. He passed away early Sunday morning without warning. I found him lying in his bed unresponsive. I have no means of proving that it was because of his dog food but I just can't beleive that he could go from being so healthy to this in less than a month. I had some food still left from last bag so I did not open new bag until 06/04/2015 at dinner time. They started showing symptoms saturday night 06/06/2014 they wouldnt eat dinner. I tried mixing in wet food and they only ate wet food not the dry. When me and my husband woke up up sunday morning 06/07/2015 the house had at least 20 piles of bloody vomit and bloody diarrhea. Tried to feed them and they would not eat breakfast. The older dog (b) (6) wouldnt get up and the younger one was very timid as we were getting ready to go to the ER vet the younger one threw up bloody mucus vomit in front of us. When we got to the vet (b) (6) the younger one was still throwing up vomit. The older one (b) (6) on inspection from the vet had blood in her stool. They were admitted to ER vet. They gave them medication andIV fluids. The vet ran blood work, ultra sound and xrays. Couldnt find anything and called us to ask if they could have gotten into any posions or toxins. we keep anything posions or toxic away from them. Plus we have a cat that dodnt get sick (b) (6) was allowed to come home as of monday the 8th in the evening. (b) (6) they younger one had to stay longer due to still not eating and diarrhea. EON-211751	6/14/2015 16:12	Beneful Dog Food	I switched my dog to Beneful Puppy Food about 2-3 months ago and he was doing good but then 2-3 weeks ago I bought Beneful Dog Food because the Family Dollar store had no puppy food and my dog was out of food. So 2-3 days after he started the dog food his health started to decline. He started eating less, drinking less, then his eyes started to get very glossy and red. Then he started to lose weight. He would eat a few bites a day just to kill the hunger. He would just lay there and whine and cry. He would be walking and whine out the blue. Then while he was sleeping it's like he was having nightmares every time he slept because he whined, cried, bark, growl, and I feel it was all because he was in pain. So when I told a friend how sick my dog was and that I switched his food she told me it was all over Facebook and the news that someone is suing Beneful. Well suing the Purina company because their dogs are sick and died like other numerous dogs that have died and got sick from that food. I can't afford a vet bill right now so all I could do was switch his dog food. I'm a single mother barely able to pay my bills and I feel so bad because I can't take him to the vet. I'm so worried that it has affected my dog's organs or maybe permanent damage. They need to take that dog food off the shelves. I started him on IAMS puppy food yesterday and he seems a little better I'm praying it didn't damage his organs. Please help.	9	Months	Dog	Pit Bull	30	Pound

EON-211710	6/13/2015 16:33	Superior Nutrition Insect Power Gut Load with Chorella Algae & Spirulina	I received a bag of "Superior Nutrition Power Gutload" from Beth Greathouse, owner of Greathouse Farms, that is intended for feeding to the insect food of my bearded dragons 24 hours before feeding the insects to them. This product is advertised as a "highly nutritious" gutload that contains Chlorella and spirulina algae. Approximately 6 weeks after using this product I noticed my dragons started to act unwell, some exhibited different symptoms, while some exhibited no symptoms.. Within a few days of each other 3 of my dragons had large bowl movements containing roundworm.. I then did fecal testing on all of my dragons and found they all had a mixture of roundworm, hookworm, and flagellates infections. But the infection was the same across the board for all of my dragons, indicating a food source since none of my dragons are housed together or have any common area they share.. I then made several cultures of the gutload, it was the only new thing I had introduced to their diet and since these parasites are commonly found in algae it was the first thing I thought of.. I was able to grow and identify hookworm with certainty, and also there was a large growth of an unknown bacteria whose characteristics and movement are identical to Cholera. Since this algae is grown and harvested from outdoor water pools in Asia, and it seems they do not have a good quality control system, there is a good chance that it may in fact be Cholera. This bacteria can also be seen in fecal samples from my bearded dragons.. I am having an incredible time getting this under control and have already lost one of my pets and am afraid I may lose more before this is over..	1	Years	Lizard		200	Gram

On May 31st, I started feeding him the Beneful Healthy Weight. On Monday, June 1st, he was acting a bit lethargic but nothing too bad. On Tuesday June 2nd, he stopped eating and drinking, and was very lethargic, but looked like it was too painful to lay down so he would lean against the wall. I took him to the vet on Wednesday June 3rd, and he said he had an enlarged liver, and his bilirubin levels were high, and he had signs of liver failure. He thought we might have to put him down. He gave him lots of fluids and some other medications and he seems to be getting much better now. Thank goodness. I have continued the medication and a special diet. Luckily I didn't continue to feed him the Beneful food. I just did an internet search this morning wondering if there was any recalls on his food, because he had been in the house the whole time and hadn't gotten into anything. I switched to a pro dog food called dick van pattens Natural Balance limited ingredient Diet dog food. The Boston Terrier, after switching his food, began to be disorientated and swerve his head slowly. I didn't believe it was the food because I switched to what I believed was a good brand. He was also kind of sickly so I and the vet believed he just had some type of virus. When I took him to the vet they said it could be a number of things and they weren't really sure so they gave him antibiotics. about a week or two later, although my dog had all of his shots, he ended up dying at 5 & a half months old from contracting parvo. The vet wasn't sure if it was a new strand or what had happened. I then moved out of the contaminated apartment and began taking care of my mother's rat terrier mix puppy. He was also lethargic and shaky just like the Boston Terrier. The Boston Terrier was a month older than him but started the food around the same age, 4 months old. EON-210474	6/3/2015 12:08	friskies	I have been feeding this cat food for years and for the last 2 months my cat run from it when the smell it. It has a horrible odor. Different from before and when they get hungry enough they will eat some. All of them are depressed and drink extra large amount of water. I thought they were just getting finiky but when all of them turned up their noses at this can food I got suspicious. I see on the internet that all the flavors I buy are the ones that have reports on them. I believe the quality of Friskies can cat food has changed. I think it is the worst of ingredients. Worst grade tallow left overs and it is making my cats sick. No I have not taken them to the vet. I can't afford it at this time.	5	Years	Cat	American Shorthair	4	Pound

I had to rush him to the vet today as he was not eating or drinking. An x-ray and blood work was done. The only thing that showed up was a high neutrophil count indicating a bacterial infection. He is very dehydrated, lethargic and still will not eat or drink. I may have to take him back for IV fluids. I have already spent $382 for the tests, antibiotic and anti-vomiting shots. There wasn't ANY other reason for his vomiting, and I have seen many other posts online with other cat owners who had the very same problem with the same cat food and the same expiration date. This may be worth your looking into. I hope he recovers and it doesn't leave permanent damage, or Purina will have me on their warpath. EON-210005	6/1/2015 11:40	Hill's Science Diet z/d	My dog, (b) (6) refused to eat her dry dog food beginning yesterday [5/31]. I opened a new package of "Prescription z/d" last week, washed out the plastic storage container in which I customarily store her food, and (regrettably) disposed of all but the name label on the food. In 12 years, (b) (6) has eaten all of her food, within three minutes of its being placed in her bowl, only refusing it on two occasions [both when she was sick or injured and required veterinary care]. Thus, I was concerned and took note of the fact that she was a bit lethargic over the past couple of days. I became suspicious of the food when I noticed that she was VERY interested in eating anything else but this kibble, leading me to believe that something was "off" about it. I called Hills to express my concern, and they took a report, but basically immediately went into a defensive posture: repeating five times that they conduct quality control tests before/during/after the production process; saying multiple times that they manufacture tons of food every day; telling me that they have never had recalls or problems with their food; saying that their food is no longer their responsibility once its released into the chain of custody; refusing to accept a mailed sample of the food in question; and finally telling me that I could pay to have the food tested myself but refusing to suggest a lab that might provide this service or to give me any pointers about what I might ask that the food be tested for. I DID call a lab in (b) (6) and was told that without any guidance, such testing would likely be prohibitively expensive. They also said that finding a lab that conducted such testing would be difficult, but that I may be able to get better information from a lab in (b) (6) Hill's Science Diet z/d is about the most expensive food that a consumer can purchase--in my case, I've given up cable and a gym membership partially to factor in this cost because my dog's health is important to me--and I'm extremely disappointed by their lack of interest in product quality and unwillingness to even consider that something may be wrong with this food. I have called my veterinarian, and the staff there was equally surprised by the nature of Hill's response. They have agreed to follow up to see if there's anything we can do to determine if there are problems with this food. Just as I am, they are concerned about the safety and well being of other people's beloved pets. I realize that there probably isn't any action to take at this point, but I'm filing a report in case it turns out that there is a problem with Hills' food. If there is, and others were rebuffed as I was, I hope that the company is accountable for their inaction.

It is expensive so I gradually switched her to Purina Beneful to be able to afford it and Purina is suppose to be a highly reputable company and well trusted. After switching her to beneful, she began to have severe symptoms once again. Hair loss, lethargic, gagging, vomiting, diarrhea. Then not eating or drinking and needing to urinate like every few minutes. I took her again to (b) (6) at (b) (6) (b) (6) I think it was in January. (all the dates I listed are approximate and are not exact as I did not keep a journal). He kept her one or two nights and gave her meds and fluids, checked her for parasites and other illnesses that matched her symptoms. He chalked it up to be gastroenteritis type of thing. I kept feeding her the beneful, thinking her symptoms would go away. They eased up every week for a couple of days, but she was still very lethargic. Her hair was coming out in wods and plugs. She had spots that were bald. She would constantly cough/gag and not want to eat some days. Then other days she would eat some and she did not want to drink much either. She began to eating grass when I took her to pottie. This started about 2 months ago. It was like the grass was candy to her. I had began to think she was suffering from depression/separation anxiety because she loves her daddy so much and she missed him when he went to work. Besides, I took her to the vet for the same thing few months back and they did not find anything. Finally, few weeks ago, it got so bad, she was pooping out bad diarrhea with blood in it and vomiting and extremely lethargic. I called the emergency animal hospital on acton rd. The lady who answered the phone asked me what I fed her. I told her beneful. she said there had been issues where it was killing other dogs and making others sick and to not feed her that anymore. She instructed me to boil chicken and rice and give her some of that after 24 hours and give her pure canned pumpkin (spoon or two) and I had some left over metronidazole and she said give her one a day for a day or so and 10 mg of pepcid once a day. I then started her back on Science Diet Sensitive stomach and skin food and she immediately started showing signs of improvement with in the next day or so. She is like a totally different dog now. Her hair is not falling out as much now and it has a sheen to it. When she was on beneful her hair was really dry and dull and coarse. now her eyes are bright again and she is full of energy. She is still recovering, but I firmly believe that beneful almost killed my dog.....She suffered greatly and I know this because of what I seen her go through and also from her just laying there whining. she always had tear drainage and I did not know why. I had thought it was allergies. now it is not doing that anymore. she had a horrible smell of something dead coming out of her skin and she is still emitting that odor but not as bad. hoping it goes away within time. I tried removing it and was able to cut a piece out with a steak knife but there were still smaller pieces embedded and sticking up in a bunch of other spots around the treat. Contacted Purina and they basically just said they would send a postage paid envelope for me to send the product back to them

EON-208859	5/19/2015 17:04	PURINA CAT CHOW COMPLETE	We opened the new bag of Purina the 9th of May. We noticed (b) (6) (age 2 male) seeming kind of mopey beginning Tuesday the 12th. Saturday the 16th we noticed he hadn't eaten his breakfast or dinner. Sunday Morning we woke to find him in a puddle of his own urine and unable control his bladder. Monday the 18th we took him to the vet. Was called today and blood work shows that his kidneys are not functioning properly and they could fail and he could die. He is staying another 48 hours to be pumped with fluids and antibiotics. If this does not work he will die Monday the 18th, after taking (b) (6) to the vet I returned home to find (b) (6) (age 2 male) also not eating the food, choosing instead to eat the dog food, which he never does. Our smallest dog also will not eat the food (which he loves cat food anytime he can get it) So far (b) (6) is not showing the same signs, but Vet has recommended not to eat this bag and to bring him in for testing	2	Years	Cat	Unknown	15	Pound

EON-208685	5/18/2015 13:28	Kibbles 'n Bits Chef's Choice Bistro	I acquired my dog in March of this year from my son who had her since a puppy. She came with a bag of Kibbles n Bits, Chef's Choice, Bistro best, UPC 7910051479, best by 8/12/16. I took her to the vet the day after I got her and he said she was underweight and she received her shots. I thought maybe her stomach upset was because of the shots, as she kept throwing up, was shedding alot, and irritated. She began leaking fluid from her teats and not eating, so I tried doing what the vet suggested of rice and boiled chicken which she would throw up as well. I put her on rice and chicken (homemade) and that seemed to help but she continued to lose weight, be lethargic and irritated. One night, her eyes were sticky and bulging/purple and I took her to the vet who did a blood test and said she was in renal failure, dying. Her numbers were "off the chart", kidneys were shutting down, he suggested putting her down. We thought about it overnight and asked for other options. We were told to put her in the hospital where they could rehydrate her and possible kick-start her kidneys. The vet said she could have gotten into some antifreeze, which we are sure did not happen. We purchased some supplements, and got a prescription for special food which she is now on. We are taking it one day at a time and giving her lots of attention and love. She has a will to live, so much personality and I am suspicious of the food she came with being the culprit of her declining health. She is only 5 years old.	5	Years	Dog	Bulldog	40	Pound

EON-208530	5/16/2015 16:00	Greenies	I purchased three bags of Greenies - Health & Joint on Tues, 5/12/15. They were by two get one free. I fed one to my dog that evening. During the course of the night, she threw up several times all over the house. She drank water that morning and when I went home at lunchtime to check on her she seemed fine. Since she eats Greenies all the time (and loves them!) I thought it might have been the new type of Greenie I purchased (Hip & Joint) that had something different in it that upset her stomach so I went to the Petsmart close to me in (b) (6) and exchanged the Hip & Joint formula for the Regular. On the way home I noticed a strange smell in my car and realized I had smelled that same smell when I made the first purchase. Anyway, when I got home I gave (b) (6) a Greenie. I continued cooking and realized she was acting like she was going to throw up - licking and swallowing very fast. She started barking, I took her outside and she ate some grass, came back in and drank a bowlful of water. I saw that she had only eaten half of the Greenie and the rest was on the floor. That is when I knew that there was something wrong with it. My dog would NEVER NOT eat a Greenie unless there was something wrong with it. Also, there was the issue of that smell that had never smelled before. The closest thing I can think of to describe the smell is strange fresh mulch smell but stronger. Just to be clear - I am talking about two different purchases of the same product three days apart at two different locations.	9	Years	Dog	Unknown	37	Pound

I checked the bag prior to opening (i.e. squeezed) as I have in the past purchased one that had been inadvertently cut with a knife when removing from the case. The bag appeared fine. I opened and sprinkled 2 handfuls of food onto the floor for the dogs as a treat then headed to the kitchen to prepare their meal. As I walked away, I noticed an unusual odor, shook the bag, and was shocked to find that a LOT of pieces of the food were stuck together with blue mold! I stopped the dogs from eating what was left, called my vet (who indicated not to make them throw up), called the manufacturer (only got a phone service that said I would be called back sometime today), and then prepared the rest of their meal (with dry kibble that they also eat daily). I did not keep the original packaging of the treat involved in this incident. I do, however, believe it is important that this problem is addressed. I pour dog treats into a large air tight bucket to keep mice and the cat out of them. I have never had an issue before, as mentioned above. After a few weeks to a month of having these Sunshine Mills Pupcorn treats in the bucket I noticed small holes in the treats. A short time later, hundreds upon hundreds of bugs were crawling all over in the treat bucket. There is absolutely no way for a bug to enter the bucket from the outside. They had to have come from inside the treat bag. Having never had these issues before, I carelessly threw away the original packaging. I was checking for worms in their feces or something like that because I didn't know what was wrong. On Friday (b) (6) or Saturday, (b) (6) (b) (6) started vomiting and diarrhea. I called my vet's office, (b) (6)* and was told she could not come in until Monday. I made her appointment for Monday, (b) (6) at 11:45 am. I am distraught at this time because when my dogs are sick, I'm a nervous wreck because to me they are my children. Dr. (Male Dr.) did an examination and gave her a vaccination shot. I didn't come in for a vaccination shot, I came in to find out what was wrong with my dog. I took her home and I started feeding them ground beef and rice which the vet said would be good to bind her up again. He thought she had too much mineral oil that and the bedding probably made her sick.	8 Years	Dog	Mixed (Dog)	45	Pound

I called up the following day, (b) (6) she was still bad and doing worse. I brought her in that day and I believe she saw Dr. (Female Dr.) that time and received a subcutaneous injection that I don't recall what it was or what it did to her. I was told they needed their heartworm pill at this appointment time. I said I would purchase the pill but they are not getting it because they are too sick for this pill at this time. (I can't believe my dog being that sick and they were pushing toxic pills). That evening (b) (6) was projectile vomiting as we were running to the back door so violently that my legs and feet were drenched. All she had was water, chopped beef and rice and it all came out.

I called up the next morning, (b) (6) and explained what happened and I had to get her back in there again. The vet finally gave her an injection of Cerenia which finally stopped her vomiting and after that, she was on the mend again. She was ALSO diagnosed with a urinary tract infection. I was kind of mad that was not found on MONDAY, two days prior or even Tuesday but 3 visits to find a problem? The vet actually said, and I quote: "If she wasn't so damn fat, I may be able to do some tests on her to see what's wrong." I was prescribed Amoxicillin for the dog which I filled at Rite Aid pharmacy.

During this week I also had to bring in (b) (6) and (b) (6) as they were exhibiting signs of vomiting and diarrhea as well-which at first I believed was from the Mineral Oil that they told me to give them to allow the bedding to come out. I know (b) (6) was seen on (b) (6) by Dr. (Male Dr.) . I believe (b) (6) was seen on (b) (6) by Dr. (Female Dr.) . (b) (6) received 10 pills of Metronidazole 500 MG. By contrast the day prior, (b) (6) (b) (6) received 15 pills of Metronidazole (I don't know the MG amt). I called up to ask them why (b) (6) received 5 more pills than (b) (6) . I was not given an adequate reply. I believe it was something like "because that's what she needed." Believing my vet's office is competent and knows better than me, I didn't question further.

During the time these dogs were getting this medication, I bought cans of Alpo dog food from the Walmart near my home (b) (6). I had small cans and large cans. I would share one large can with the three of them in the morning and a smaller can at night. This was done so that they would all take their medicine because canned food is a special treat and not given often. At this time it was daily due to the medicine they were getting. I also purchased Purina Moist and Meaty for them. (b) (6) stopped eating that altogether in early April. She would not even eat the Kibbles and Bits I had purchased for them (which I later found out has anti-freeze in it). I still have some of the dog food here. I began giving (b) (6) a bland diet of rice, baby pastina and whatever else I had handy in terms of protein. I normally have boneless chicken breasts and London Broil cuts of beef in my freezer. As I was cooking dinner I would make some for them as well. The other two dogs were at that time still eating the other food so only (b) (6) was eating this.

(b) (6) vomited bile on Monday, (b) (6) After that she really had a very small appetite. I was very nervous for my dogs and was watching them closely to make sure they weren't getting into any birds that came into my yard or anything. (b) (6) (b) (6) had a bowel movement that seemed normal on Thursday, (b) (6) I was giving her what food I could to make her better and she hadn't been vomiting all week.

On Friday, (b) (6) I took all three to the vets to get heartworm tested. Their tests all came back negative. At that time I mentioned to the vet tech that (b) (6) had vomited bile on Monday and I had her on a bland diet. I asked if it was ok to give this heartworm pill to her. The vet tech said the heartworm pill had nothing to do with what was wrong with her--so give it to her. ??

(b) (6) took the pill approximately 3 pm on Friday (b) (6) I let my dogs out at 3:45 am because they woke me and had to go out. At 6:30 am, my son woke me up to tell me someone had thrown up and it stinks. I get up to clean it and it's dark gray in color. I wanted my husband to look at it so I put it in bags and saved it but he could not come to my house at that time. I threw it out the next day. Since that heartworm pill was given, (b) (6) was in a constant state of Vomiting.

On Monday, (b) (6) I took (b) (6) in and had blood work done on her. At that appointment Dr. (Male Dr.) said: "It's in their environment, do you have fertilizer around? Rat poison?" To which I replied, No I don't. I even told him my neighbor fertilizes but my fence is 8 feet away from his sideways and the fertilizer is 30 feet back from the end of my fence so it's not possible. He mentioned ants. I said I have ants but put only white vinegar outside the house and it's not even in my fence where the dogs are and only baking soda inside my house, NO POISONS.

I Then asked him if it was the dog food. I told him what I had given them. I also said that there have been many complaints against Purina online. He stated: "Anybody can make a website and say anything they want online so don't believe everything you hear." I believe I said, if it was one person I would be skeptical, but since 4000 or more people are complaining, I tend to believe it. He had an attitude like I was poisoning my dogs when it was the dog food brand that HE recommended (Purina One).

The next day, (b) (6) Dr. (Male Dr.) told me to bring (b) (6) in and he would give her IV fluids all day to try to flush out her kidneys because she had kidney problems. When I picked her up he told me to get Pepcid because it has something in it to try to calm her stomach and also Ensure to give her some strength. He gave me a syringe and told me to force feed her.

(b) (6) was still vomiting everything, food water, after she got home. My husband

			gave her the pepcid pill, at the time, she bit him which she would not normally do. I think she knew the last pill he gave her, the heartworm, done her wrong. After four days of running around trying to do everything I could for this baby, I asked my husband to take her to his house. I lost 12 lbs in 4 days from my frantic stress over this baby. She would either get better or not. I visiting at least 4x per day, bringing homemade chicken broth and chicken and trying to get her to eat, to no avail. I called the vet's office on Friday, (b) (6) in the early morning. I told them what was happening to (b) (6). She said, (b) (6) has kidney failure." I said, What does that mean? Is she going to die? The vet tech who answered the phone said, "When a person gets kidney failure, what happens to them?" I asked again, so is she going to die? She put me on hold and then told me I have to come in at 10:30 to speak with the vet directly. She would not even give me an answer--this is the one who told me to give (b) (6) the heartworm pill because it was ok. I made the appointment initially but decided against going. I called and canceled at about 9:55 am. (b) (6) was euthanized at 8:30 am on (b) (6) She was 8 years and one week old. I have video that I posted of my 3 girls playing in the snow on February 20th that was taken sometime earlier in the month. She looked fine at that time but it was sub-zero temps here and three dogs were shedding like I never seen before. Now I know it's a sign of a problem. The other two dogs are now on Blue Buffalo.

This day I gave them each a piece of one and they each took it but now as avidly as usual. Later I found part of the treats left on the ground. My pom (b) (6) has cushings disease and is on Veterol. So she has put on a lot of weight. Instead of 10 pounds she weighed 16 pounds. My (b) (6) was only 6 pounds. (b) (6) started acting really strange, running around the room and getting up and down on the bed every few minutes. The vet did not see her after she had eaten the treats. I saw the vet on (b) (6) and she ran some more tests. The last time I talked to the vet on Thursday the (b) (6), (b) (6) was beginning to act like something was really hurting her. I called the vet in the late afternoon on the (b) (6) and she said to bring her in at 8am so she could watch her. By 1:00 am, she was really struggling to breathe. At 5:50am on Friday morning she let out a final sigh and died. I thought it had to do with her liver and maybe it did. Poison would really finish off a dog with liver problems. The only thing is the same day my big pom started to throw up and had severe diarrhea. She lost 3 lbs in one week, and I thought she was going to die too. But she finally started to get better. Looking back, those treats, and I still have the package, probably are what killed her. I can't hardly stand her being gone. I loved her so much. I don't want anyone to have to go through this terrible pain. My grandson offered a piece of the treats to his girlfriends big pit bull dog. He wasn't going to let her eat it, just see if she would take it. She refused it and she is usually eager to eat anything offered to her. A little over 24 hours ago, she started vomiting approximately every hour and stopped eating and drinking altogether. The vomit became solely liquid with a yellowish tint, and was escalated to more than hourly. She became depressed and went off in a dark corner. Because she is normally very healthy and got very sick, quickly, over the course of about 24 hours. I tried to figure out what was wrong, since she is normally very, very healthy, and I came across the warning letter to Purina, and the the foods mentioned were the exact ones I feed her, the Little Friskies canned wet food. I regularly buy her the 48 (5.5 oz) can variety pack in classic pate (salmon dinner, ocean whitefish & tuna dinner, mixed grill and turkey&giblets dinner). She was up all last night vomiting, and this morning, I took her to the vet. The vet took tests to rule out other causes, and asked me to send her the FDA warning letter. My cat was given a shot of 10 mg of Cerenia which seems to have stopped the nausea. No food or water for 6 hours, and then a little water, and a 1/4 of a 3 oz can of Royal Canin gastro intestinal moderate calorie food, the Vet suggested. She's been prescribed Cerenia (16 mg) half tab daily as needed for vomiting and nausea.
